

YOUR host, Lori Moore

About the Host

Lori Moore has lived many lives within one. Artist, journeyman electrician, craftsman, entrepreneur, homesteader, art instructor, play group coordinator, teacher, and birthkeeper. Each role has carried her deeper into the same pursuit: how to live with integrity in a world that trades truth for convenience.

In 2008, Lori founded Lori Wall Beds, handcrafting over 100 Murphy beds in her small workshop and shipping them to nearly every state in the U.S. From there, she built a second branch of the business, offering DIY plans and hardware kits for those who, like her, desired to build with their own hands and save money.

Alongside her husband and children, Lori chose a homesteading life, living in a converted bus (a story featured on HGTV in 2014), building earthen “cob” structures by hand, teaching art techniques to all ages, leading natural building workshops, and birthing two of her children at home without a doctor or midwife. These were acts of a return to older ways of strength, small community-reliance, and slow-paced beauty.

The Full Spectrum Course and podcast grew out of this lived philosophy. Lori believes that education reaches far beyond the memorization of facts and into the cultivation of envisioning natural spaces, symbiotic community, and a better future. Her teaching carries students from universal truths to Natural Law, from clear speech to healthy dialogue, from personal responsibility to the reimagining of social systems.

Her voice carries both challenge and invitation. She asks piercing questions: What does it mean to live free? To build homes, families, and cultures with a strength capable of enduring? She points to answers written in nature, remembered in the wisdom of native peoples in un“developed” nations the world-wide, and embodied in the quiet integrity of a well-lived life.

Today, Lori continues her homesteading work, her Healthy Home Initiative, and her teaching, inviting others to join in what she calls a renaissance of responsibility and imagination. She envisions communities scaled to human size that are local enough for systems to run smoothly, cooperative enough for reciprocity with the land, and resilient enough to endure through many generations in health. To her, this journey rises above mere survival in political chaos and recovers the joy and dignity of being fully human.

A personal note from Lori:

Public School Curriculum is failing our society as it merely scratches the surface of UNIFIED SCIENCE and conceals truths about NATURE and HEALTH.

Historical lies steer the mass-mind away from self-reliance and away from the wisdom of old-growth artisan culture.

Your kids are coveted by "big business" to be recruited and installed into their STEM programs in order to keep creating the world we live in... the world we have been watching unfold under the direction of a few.

Disease, war, economic crisis, food supply interruptions and industrial systems that disrupt our elegant natural environment... are all a result of inferior, irrational programming delivered from the "top" down.

The BEAUTIFUL thing is,

we ALL have access to beneficial truths at any moment!
Our young people only need the space and encouragement to think for themselves.

As parents, it is important to offer our beliefs and perspectives, but when we demand thought-compliance,
we are setting them up for failure.

When we persistently bestow our world-views upon our youth regarding health, finances and politics, we may keep them from excelling beyond what we currently "know."

This course was not created to deliver what we know...
This is a 9~month thought exercise to encourage personal empowerment through witnessing the Full Spectrum of Universal Studies along with persistent, authentic, philosophical analysis.

In this way, our teens will discern falsehoods from personal truths in a complex world...

They will become charged with their own individual and collective missions as creators... outside of the scope of work that the current technocrats have projected for them.

The Full Spectrum Course for Teens stands in stark contrast to modern,
public programming
which limits the minds of those that are processed with it.

If you have chosen the home-schooling path, or if you are following an
