Hello groundbreaker, busy bee, DIYer who's Earth obsessed...

A garden can be a complicated thing. It's never as simple as planting a seed, watering it, and watching it grow.

You know that though. Because at this point, you're probably tired of putting hours upon hours of work into your garden with barely any yield to show for it.

Maybe you're feeling frustrated and overwhelmed when you think about your garden. Between insect damage, plants not making it to harvest, and that late-season frost, you can't seem to get ahead.

When it comes to your garden, you're looking for yields beyond your dinner plate anyway.

Things like the way the soil smells when it's alive and well. How your soul expands with your face to the sunlight. And how boundless time can feel when you're in your garden.

You built your garden because you want to grow your own food. But also because of the magic that happens when you're out there in true communion between this wild, living Earth and your deepest self.

Somewhere along the way, though, it became a chore. DIY turned into RIY — where you research-it-yourself and hope there's enough time to implement the hundreds of suggestions the internet gives you.

Between kids, work, self-care, and all the other things, your garden fell to the bottom of the list. Sometimes just the thought of getting out there feels paralyzing. While you long to feel the soil in your hands, it's just too much.

Or is it?

You can grow your favorite plants, regenerate your land, cultivate a deep connection with the Earth, and have an expert to turn to when something goes awry (and it's gardening, so something WILL go awry).

All for less money than your Netflix subscription.

Introducing...

The Mother Gardener Membership Society.

I made this membership because I know the uncertainty and anxiety that comes from not doing it “right.” It's enough to make anyone give up trying.

And you know from experience that turning to Google for answers can quickly lead you to more questions.

Besides, you've got limited resources — time, money, seeds, water, the seasons — and using them wisely can make all the difference.

What it comes down to is, the way to have a successful, abundant, and beautiful garden — without sinking all of your resources in the process — is getting help from a professional.

Since consultations often cost hundreds, that option can feel out of reach.

You deserve to have the yummy garden of your dreams. You deserve to have dirty hands and a happy tummy. You deserve to feel immeasurable pride in the buzzing, growing, lush garden that you built. And you deserve to feel the surge of childlike joy walking outside to pick greens for your dinner salad, day after day.

You were never meant to garden alone. And now, you don't have to.

Hi, I'm Cortney, the Mother Gardener

I'm a master gardener, with over five years of experience envisioning and building the gardens of my client's dreams. Though I've had my hands in the soil, gardening, for over 20 years. I run my garden coaching and consulting business from my homestead in Fort Collins, Colorado. And with the Mother Gardener Membership Society, I'm able to expand my service to a nationwide US audience.

For me, though, this is way bigger than gardening. The thing that lights me up the most is reconnecting people with nature. It's where I feel immensely purposeful.

But it's no small task.

Between fractured communities, dense urban living, and consumer culture, cutting through the noise is full-time work.

It's work that I'm dedicated to, though. Because we've lost our way. We can't see ourselves in nature. We can't read its abundant signals and signs. And the price we're paying for this is massive.

The way forward that ensures humanity's future on Earth involves improving the way we interact with the environment. There's no way around it.

Our future depends on our ability to care for the natural world — and deep care comes from knowing how it affects you and gives you life.

You are a part of nature, my friend. An essential and irreplaceable part. And my goal is to help you see yourself in the nature that's outside your door.

When you work in a garden, you've got to get out there. You've got to smell the Earth and put your hands in the soil. This is the catalyst that draws you outside and helps you to renew your relationship with our generous, wild, living planet.

So, yes. I want you to have a garden you can't wait to show off to all your loved ones. A garden that you're proud of. A garden that feeds you and your family. A garden that heals the soil and supports biodiversity.

But also? I want you to heal yourself and our world through your garden. It's okay if that seems like an overwhelming goal. Never fret, my friend, I'm here to help you every single step of the way. Together we can make a difference in our communities.

As a founding member, you're getting the best deal ever offered

This membership is worth a base-level consultation with me, which goes for $150. And the seasonal e-book is worth $27/quarter.

You're getting the same tailored support and guidance my garden coaching clients pay full price for. But you're getting it at a fraction of the price.

After the founding member window has closed, this price will go up.

But if you enroll in 2024, you'll enjoy this one-of-a-kind membership at just $11/month.

Just $11/month to feel confident in your ability to grow food, heal your land, and live in abundance.

That means you're getting my quality advice derived from years of experience for less money than one meal at the supermarket.

Honestly, if you've felt any calling to build your garden, this is a no-brainer for you.

advice but don't have the budget for that kind of support	methods — if you're committed to herbicide and pesticide use, we won't be a good fit

Here are answers to questions I get asked the most frequently

Q: Is this membership a month-to-month commitment? Or am I required to have a longer membership?

A: The Mother Gardener Membership Society is a month-to-month program. However, members who stick with it for the long haul are more confident in their abilities in the garden. They also see exponential returns the longer they stay in the membership and execute the recommendations.

Q: Do you have a money-back guarantee?

A: Since results vary widely based on implementation, there is no money-back guarantee.

Q: What's this seasonal e-book about?

A: The seasonal e-book is my passion project. And it's intentionally built to guide you back into the rhythms of the seasons. If you've ever experienced the Winter blues when the days get shorter, this e-book will give you practical tips to help you realign into rest and nesting. If you've ever felt behind realizing that Spring has sprung, the Spring edition will help you move into expansion (and not a minute too late). Releasing the inclination to live in endless Summer, the turning of the year can become your biggest ally for productivity, mental health, and cultivating a nourishing life.

Q: What type of gardening questions can I ask you during my membership?

A: The following list isn't exhaustive but it'll give you a good idea of the types of questions I can answer for you.

- Kitchen garden questions: seed starting, soil health, vegetable garden pests and diseases, vegetable garden plant selection, seedling support, transplanting and seasonal gardening.
- Large garden design questions: edible design

Q: What types of questions are you not available to answer?

A: Outside of what is recommended in the seasonal guides, support for non-edible plants is not available at this time. In those guides, you'll find tips like when to prune and fertilize most shrubs and trees.

Q: Will I have a chance to communicate with other Mother Gardener Membership Society members?

A: I am aiming to have this feature live in the summer of 2024.

Q: What garden-related topics can I expect to read about in the emails?

A: You can expect a wide range of garden topics including...

- Soil Health 101
- Seed Starting Guide
- Seed Starting Planner
- When to Fertilize
- Transplanting
- Hardening Off
- Garden Science (Learn How Your Garden Really Grows)
- Seasonal Living (Support & Suggestions to Make The Most of Changing Seasons)
- Gardening Trends
- Regenerative Agriculture & Permaculture Topics
- My Favorite Tools and Supplies for the Garden
