- Facebook: search for diffusion of knowledge
- My opinions, I'm by no means an expert. Constantly learning and evolving as a person and an educator.
- Things I come across that peak my interest in a topic (ed tech, history, teaching, trends, etc.)
- Community - we all learn better from people in the trenches with us. I want to build a community of people who want to learn and push themselves to be better educators than they are today.
- Every podcast will have: Something to think about in the greater world of education (article, topic, current event, etc.), Something I've run across in education that I'm either using or thinking about using in my classroom, Something I'm doing personally to further myself as a person either inside or outside of school.

Education:

- What does social studies or history look like at the elementary level?
 - Guest interview - Haley Horner, 4th Grade Teacher

Classroom:

- More personality in the classroom
 - Decorations - less history, more about me; What I am passionate about (Star Wars Land Memorabilia, Funko Pops, etc.); People that have influenced me (Weird Al, Pudge Rodriguez, etc.), Where I came from (College stuff, family pictures, etc.)
 - Also, don't deflect...lean into those conversations; be willing to give up class time to have deeper conversations
 - Sharing from my life - Share what I have done recently, share family stories, share my thoughts on things outside of class
 - Humanizing to students, shows the students that I'm a person with complex choices, and hopefully provides perspective to the choices their parents make or other adults make

Personal:

- What I've been watching:
 - Don't F With Cats - Really, morbid beginning. By the end of the documentary it has taken you to places you never thought you'd go. Weird twists and turns along the way. True crime with an 'online' twist.
 - Standup Comedy - Lots of random folks on Netflix to laugh a little

- Star Wars: Rebels - Watching with my son. Lots of good story lines and a short before bed wind down. It's exciting to watch my son start to love Star Wars.
- Birds of Prey - Great movie. Mostly female cast and crew. One of the best interpretations of Batman storylines...reminded me of the animated series growing up.
