Seven Alternative Ways to Use a Drone

By Adelia Ladson [images / captions omitted]

You may ask yourself, "What in the world would I do with a drone?" There are a lot of ways you can use one of these incredible flying machines. You can record family events and outdoor adventures. You can use it to entertain your kids. You can even use a drone to scout the path ahead of you when you're hiking. Just use a little bit of imagination and the possibilities are endless! But just to get you started, here are a few drone uses you may not think of.

Prove your neighbor's dog is using your yard as its own personal bathroom. Okay, folks, we all know how incredibly annoying this can be and that is probably an understatement. Especially, if you don't even own a dog and still have to clean up after one. With your drone, you can catch your neighbor's mutt in the act and confront the irresponsible homeowner with the video evidence. Then, you can post it on Face Book so your other neighbors will also know who the culprit is.

And speaking of dogs. When your kids want a four-legged pal that you don't want to end up having to take care of, get them a drone instead. No mess, no fuss. They can pet it and even take it for a walk on a leash. They don't even have to remember to feed it and it won't eat you out of house and home. Just name it spot and you have the perfect loyal family pet, who run away and probably won't get hit by a car. Plus, it will even aggravate the cat.

Wear it as a fashion accessory. Drones are definitely the "in thing" now. So, if you want to be up on the current trends, just have a drone hovering over your head like fashionable head gear and you're guaranteed that heads will turn. It's even better if it's a drone with LED night lights so you can really make a splash when you go out at night. Just don't let the propellers get caught in your hair. That would definitely be a fashion faux pas.

Wax the top of your vehicle. I don't know about you but I have a hard time trying to reach the top of my vehicle wax it. A drone is a handy thing to have to get to the spots you just can't reach without straining a muscle. Just strap on the wax applicator or buffing towel to the drone, and you're ready to go. The bonus is that your arm won't get tired from the endless buffing because the drone is doing all the work and you don't have to pay it.

Use it to crash a wedding. You know when, what you thought was a close friend, gets married and you were sure you would be a part of the wedding party but you're not included? A drone can help you get your revenge! Bring a drone as your date and you won't be sorry. Just sneak into the back row of the wedding ceremony venue and have your drone crash the ceremony by going down the aisle and dive-bombing the traitorous friend. Of course, it can also be used as a perfectly good ring-bearer. Just give it a little bow-tie and the ring and it's ready to go.

Record a documentary about the tops of people's heads. Everyone tries to be a Steven Spielberg these days but I'm sure they just don't have that creative instinct and artistic eye that you have. Right? Use your drone to make a groundbreaking documentary that explores the deep and philosophical meaning in viewing the ever-changing tapestry of the tops of people's heads. Oh, what lessons there are to be learned from viewing people from that perspective. You may even win an award.

You can race them against each other. I don't know if drone racing is a sport yet (It probably is, though) but you get me in an open field with two drones to compete against each other and I'm gonna have some fun! Matching drone flying skills in a time-trial obstacle course against a friend or friends is a great way to spend an afternoon. Then, you can kick back in the evening, watch the video footage and rag on each other's drone skills.

What is Your Knife Superstition?

By Adelia Ladson

Most folks are superstitious in one way or another. Some are superstitious about the things they do and wear so that their favorite sports team will continue a winning streak. Some folks are superstitious about what they do every day. You can find superstitions in all cultures and all aspects of society, going back to when man first walked the Earth. It's pretty much a time-honored tradition. So of course they're superstitions about knives and what you should and should not do with them. Here are 13 of them.

1. Icelandic superstition: If you drop your knife while you're cleaning fish and the knife lands with the point to the sea, you will get a great haul of fish the next time you go out fishing. On the other hand, if the knife points to land, you won't catch a thing.
2. If your lover gives you a knife as a gift, beware, they won't be your lover for long.
3. When a knife falls on the ground, they you will be visited by a man pretty soon.
4. A steel knife will protect you from curses and fairies.
5. Finnish superstition: In Finland, a knife is given as a gift as a sign of respect and is always presented with the handle first to represent trust. Knives are given to members of social and government organization members and also employees of companies.
6. You absolutely cannot say the word "knife" when you are out at sea.
7. An old superstition: When you carry a combat knife into battle, you should never return it to its sheath until has drawn blood. If you do sheath it, it will fail you in combat.
8. American superstition: Sharpening a knife after the sun goes down is bad luck.
9. A hunting superstition is that a woman should never touch a knife that is used to kill game with.
10. Crossing your knife with your spoon when you're done dining, tell the host or hostess or chef that the food was bad and you wish them bad luck in return.
11. Chinese superstition: In China, if you sleep on a bed that has knives under it, that will scare away evil spirits.
12. Russian superstition: In Russia, never leave a knife with its edge up because murders are being born as long as it's left that way.

13. Filipino superstition: In the Philippines, if you cut yourself with your knife, you have to coat it in your blood.

Black Hornet Ninja Gear Folding Grappling Hook

- Your ninja gear isn't complete without it
- Four carbon steel talons lock into place on hook
- 33' of tough braided nylon rope
- Rated at more than 800 lbs
- Compact and easy to carry

Product Description

This specially designed grappling hook folds down for compact, easy carrying. With a few twists, the four carbon steel talons can be locked into position, assuring a safe ascent. Best of all, it's rated to more than 800 lbs and comes with 33' of tough braided nylon rope.

Good Tool for hard job. Reviewed by Ocala Jack on Jan 25, 2014  4 out of 5

My first BudK purchase and my first throwing weapon. Climbing a thin rope is a special skill requiring long practice and some serious upper body strength. One of the great feats of strength of a life full of such machismo is the time I climbed this bad boy 15' up the side of a dam casement. Knot the rope at 18" intervals. This will reduce the length of the rope by about 20% but is very necessary for ascents/descents. Throwing this thing is another special skill set. Don't think you can throw a grapple without practice. So this is the right gear but be prepared to train for many hours before you

Reviewed by Justin Weatherwax on Dec 24, 2012  4 out of 5

The rope is extremely strong the grappling hook is fun to play around with but the top piece that keeps the grappling hook in place came off mine within twenty minutes of having it but is easily replaced and the medal does bend after a while but is easy to bend back so all in all a good buy

Doesn't fold down as well as I thought it would, has the tendency to bend if hooked at odd angle. The rope is difficult to climb, I would recommend a pair of gloves but even then it is challenging. Missed my target and broke the top bolt when it landed. Looks cool, you'll gain instant respect with your friends until you try to use it for climbing and end up looking like a wuss. Great for other practical purposes. I'm sure you can be creative and make many opportunities to use it elsewhere.

This is a great item! You just need to be a good thrower. You have to throw it as straight as you can because this thing goes far. The only thing that i didn't like was that the rope was too thin. And like the other reviews mention, this really hurts your hands. Hopefully this website can begin to offer some special gloves to use with the grappling hook.

(And no, i don't mean the spike gloves.) If you buy this item, ask about offering some special gloves. Maybe if they see that a lot of people want/need them, maybe they will begin to offer them. Anyway I recommend this product to EVERYBODY!!!

Reviewed by Rj Gg on Nov 03, 2007 ★★★★★ 3 out of 5

"Ninja Folding Grappling Hook", a Mix of cons and pros.

ATTN: I used the rope in a real situation, read on.

CON: Right out of the package, the black nylon rope tied to the hook has a laughable knot, a very serious danger to climbers. This was probably the most misshapen and flimsy knot I've seen. To even attempt to climb may damage your cord or it may slip and leave you with a nice 30 ft free fall. (NOTE: Luckily for me, I tie professional rope-ring knots. I used a variation of the "Cat's Paw". Except I made double circles for extra grip and less chance of slip.)

PRO: After I did my knot I tried the storing mechanism, It's genius how easy it is making it a little too simple but that's not a problem for this "Folding" ninja hook.

PRO/CON: The infamous nylon rope, the pro is that it's tough as hell and weather resistant. The CON is that your gonna need to use some thick gloves with good grip cause not only is it tough on your hands (NOTE: Lost skin while trying to climb and even throwing it a good 25 ft up.) but THE ROPE IS SKINNY thus confirming some of the other reviews on this site.

Con: If the hook fails to grab on to something and you tug on it making it come down (NOTE: Remember, I threw it to a good 25 ft) be prepared for it to come crashing down. Mine fell many times and hard hits have actually bent my hook not to the point of uselessness but enough degrees to notice that this piece of carbon steel isn't strong enough for high throws or hard landings. I didn't like to see my hook like this so I would attempt to catch it every so often, I took a numbing hit to my arm and it even made sparks as it landed on the floor another time. (NOTE: My storing mechanism it stuck now, It can't be folded anymore which is fine for me actually.)

Total Score, 3 out of 5 or 6 out of 10.

It's a good and cheap climbing tool, buy it, check your knot, get good gloves, and your set for some climbing.

Secret Agent Tactical Ninja Sword with Shoulder Harness Scabbard

- Full-tang blade for strength while cutting
- Cord-wrapped handle adds grip and comfort
- Includes durable nylon sheath
- Our number one selling sword

Product Description

This Secret Agent tactical sword is one awesome piece of steel! The sleek full-tang design measures 27" overall with a heat-treated black baked finish. The blade features fantasy cutouts, teeth-like serrations, a piercing point and slides smoothly into the included nylon sheath. I bought one several years ago. As soon as I opened the package I was a little let down. It was balanced well, but too thin for my liking. I used it mostly for hacking weeds and bushes in the yard, worked great at that, but one hit up to close to the handle and it snapped in half. If they make a thicker one I would definitely buy another.

very light and sharp, blade isnt that thick but for me thats a bonus. Tied into the molle webbing of my bug out bag adding little weight with a nice increase in capability. I wrapped the grip in hockey tape, this is a easy fix to the paracord issue that plagues swords in this category. Im not sure why people complain about the grips when it can be solved so easily. Heck, its fun to make your own custom grips on these things, I use the orange para cord but thats just me. A perfect utility sword for the back country, so light you wont even know its there.

My dad came home with this "Secret Agent Tactical Ninja Sword" the other day. Sharp edge but going to strop it to give it a cleaner cut. Little flaw but i think of it more as character along one of the holes down the blade. Light weight but wish it was a little heavier, probably needs to be a bit thicker too. Handle is good for one or two hands. It's a must have for any collection. Sheath is but too flimsy but take a long thin piece of plastic and run it inside it'll stay. Great buy! (I got mine 2nd hand but know it came from you cause it has your logo on it and say's "BudK" on the box.)

I made the Death Stroke review on the twin set. Reviewed by on Nov 24, 2015  5 out of 5

I wanted to give this product a more thorough review. I am a martial artist with some weapons training. I bought six of these. These blades are great machetes. I have one that I use and abuse to test it's capabilities. To be good swords they need a bit more steel on them in terms of thickness and weight. The scabbards like everyone else's reviews are not very good. Some of the blades are extremely sharp and cut through the stitching on both sides of the scabbard. The rivets are the only things keeping them together. If they were made from a stiffer material like glass filled nylon or leather they would be perfect. Glass filled nylon with a molle system would be very useful as well. Some of the points were dull. I resharpened the edges and reshaped the points and work great. The wrapping on the handle is flimsy, but if you rewrap it and apply some heat it will harden the outside and prevent from slipping and come undone. Melt the end where it is tied off stop it entirely. This product still gets five stars from me. I enjoy using these blades. Just wish China didn't make them. U.S. would do a much better job and sold for much more.

I have been practicing martial arts since I was about 5 years old. I'm now in my mid 20's and let's just say I know a good weapon when I feel one. The weapon here has some minor tweaks like it's size and weight. It's balance and what not. Considering I paid 12 dollars for it, it has proved to be a good sword. It feels good in your hand but since it's so small They should have sold it in a two package set. It's more like an over-sized bowie knife. However, because of the serrated edge on the bottom side and the dull blade (don't sharpen it) it would make a very hard wound to repair if say, you ever had to use it in self defense. Overall I am satisfied with this product.

The metal accents on the blade rattle and the sheathe is nigh on useless. Barely got the blade out and now it gets stuck about 3/4th of the way down. I had to pull so hard to free it again, I thought I was going to injure myself or break something. The weight of the sword as a whole however is fantastic, but the rattling from the accents when you swing is annoying.

I bought this as a poor impromptu weapon for the few times I can't be better armed. And of course, I wanted to give it a workout/break-in/field test. I didn't want to do what's been done. I can smash melons with my hands and feet. Cinder blocks just really aren't that tough (YouTube children's karate). And I wanted to really test the stick. So I went out to my solid concrete back porch and just wailed upon the concrete doing my best to dislodge the "faux wood cap". About 25 overhand blows. The cap now has some seriously tiny scratches on it (note: smooth concrete porch). The stick is fine, the porch is fine, anything that got between the stick and the porch would NOT have been fine.

The polypropylene tested out to be tougher than hickory or mesquite (I have a stick collection). BTW, the balance on this walking stick is excellent. There's 2-3 good pivot points down the shaft. I only wish I had a Cold Steel version to do a side-by-side comparison.

I had to use JB weld for the parts to line up. Also I feel I could loose the firing pin. I would like to see the firing pin milled down quickly to bring it slightly into the next pipe. Drill a hole in it. A string could be put through and pulled through the other pipes. The string could be tied to a washer that fits inside the pipe but can't go through the pipes. the firing pin could not fall out. Great fun to build and shoot.

I got this in the mail today and put it together in no time once I had purchased the 1/2" parts required. Lowe's had 1/2" T that would not allow the firing pin to slide through. Be sure to check or you will be making another trip out to Home Depot. Which is what I did! Home Depot had the T that worked. Very fun to shoot and put together. I purchased the laser sight accessory and it adds that extra bang to the look! Highly recommend that laser sight.

- For pet fish only; not for human consumption

Product Description

Without a well-stocked cache of broad-spectrum antibiotics like Fish Mox Amoxicillin, it's just a matter of time before your beloved pet fish falls victim to bacterial disease, spread readily and rapidly in calamitous times when water treatment systems are offline and hygiene takes a backseat to survival. Thankfully, you can easily cure most common bacterial ailments with amoxicillin, and none is more affordable and reliable than Fish Mox. It's manufactured using the same quality standards for safety and potency as any antibiotic labeled for human use, as verified by its USP grade seal. You can, thus, count on Fish Mox to provide your dearest pets with the same caliber of care you'd get from your own trusted physician or pharmacist. A must-have for every aquarium, home, RV, emergency shelter, supply cache or bug-out bag, Fish Mox Amoxicillin is supplied in bottles of 100 convenient, space-saving capsules. At 250 mg, each capsule contains a perfect dose of amoxicillin for a typical antibiotic treatment course. Best of all, Fish Mox Amoxicillin is versatile; the tried-and-true first generation antibiotic treats a broad assortment of common bacterial maladies, including staph and various infections of the urinary tract, gills/respiratory tract, bones, joints, soft tissue and scales/skin. You never know where you'll be when disaster strikes, and at this affordable price - the lowest you'll find anywhere - it's painless to stock multiple locations for maximum preparedness. Your pet fish will thank you! Don't forget friends and family who own pets! Gifting Fish Mox Amoxicillin is a terrific way to show your love and concern, while safeguarding the health of loved ones' scaly, gilled companions. Like all antibiotics, amoxicillin will not treat viral or fungal disease. For pet/ornamental fish use only. Not for use in fish raised as a human food source. Not for human consumption.

Good to go Reviewed by on Mar 01, 2016  4 out of 5

Used these recently to train myself, and was pretty impressed. They don't match the picture shown above, but are instead shaped more like a pill, though they may have changed their look since I bought them. Along with the tablets, you'll also find a plastic bag inside that you can use to hold the pills while using the bottle as a canteen. The flavor is pretty good, but the tablets get sticky almost immediately after you touch them, which makes me worry about them in a travelling situation where you would need to bag them and put them into your pocket. Regardless, they do seem to fill you up despite their size when taken with water (I'm a large man and can put away a lot of food, just for reference), which shows that they do serve their purpose well, though after a week you will need to find some kind of food to supplement it or start eating more of them. I suggest that anyone who buys survival food or tablets buys their first ones with the intent of using them long before they expire. If you don't know how they work or how your body will react to the drastic shift in diet, they won't do you any good.

Product is well constructed, along with the beautifully crafted wooden box. I immediately sensed it's power as soon as the UPS delivery pulled up in my driveway. I felt it even more after I have received it and opened the box. My chakra has never been stronger. I am now able to withstand a lot of pain while holding these in my hand. Using a 12 oz ballpeen hammer , I struck my right hand with full force. I hardly felt anything. I will try to test it's powers some more, and will submit a new review soon.
