Their emigration	Given what's in the right-hand column here, and absent any other original records, there appears to be no support (other than compiled and unsourced genealogies— see below) that the Stepney John Budd and wife Katherin, with son John Budd, were the immigrants to New England.	That this couple is the immigrant couple is supported by the matching names of children (baptisms and later) Earliest record of John Budd in New England appears to be 1640. Source:Anderson's The Great Migration Newsletter

- John Budd, 1599-1670, and some of his descendants ? Published in 1992.

Conclusion:

What we know is that a John Budd and wife Katherin, baptized a son John Budd in 1625 in Stepney, London. There appear to be no other sources for this couple or family. No other children. No proof that this was the emigrating family to New Haven, then Rye.

We also know that at St. Andrews parish, in Chichester, a John Budd married a Katherine Butcher in 1620, and what followed were a number of baptisms in that same parish that match the known children of John Budd and Katherine of New England/New York as named in 1669 records; namely: Mary, John, Joan and Judith.
