Amy Lewis is currently the Senior Director of Development at the Boys & Girls Clubs of Greater St. Louis. While youth development is a cause very near and dear to her heart, Amy has had more than seventeen years in the nonprofit sector serving a variety of causes. While attending a United Way Campaign kickoff in 2005, Amy fell in love with the energy in the room and all of the organizations being recognized. It was in that moment she decided to switch from her tenured hospitality management career to focus more on those in need. When speaking to her career in the nonprofit sector, Amy often says, "I want to save them all! The babies, the children, the puppies, all of them!" Her experience ranges from special event management, growing donor relationships, and elevating affinity groups and major gift prospects. Yet working with selfless volunteers is her sweet spot.

Fun Fact: I played the part of a young Shirley Temple for three consecutive years at The Fabulous Fox theater and was able to meet her on stage during a performance and a tribute to her life. Then when they interviewed me on the news about it I froze! Haha!
