METHOD

The description of the method follows the approach used, for field research: Describe the research design, participants/samples, data collection techniques, instruments used, and the methods for data analysis. This section should be detailed enough for the research to be replicable.

For conceptual articles: describe the research approach, data sources: specify the types of sources you used, data collection and analysis techniques: describe the specific analytical methods applied to the literature, such as content analysis, discourse analysis, or historical analysis. This demonstrates that your ideas are built systematically on a solid scholarly foundation, not just personal opinion
