

Click register, and then create an account by filling in the fields.

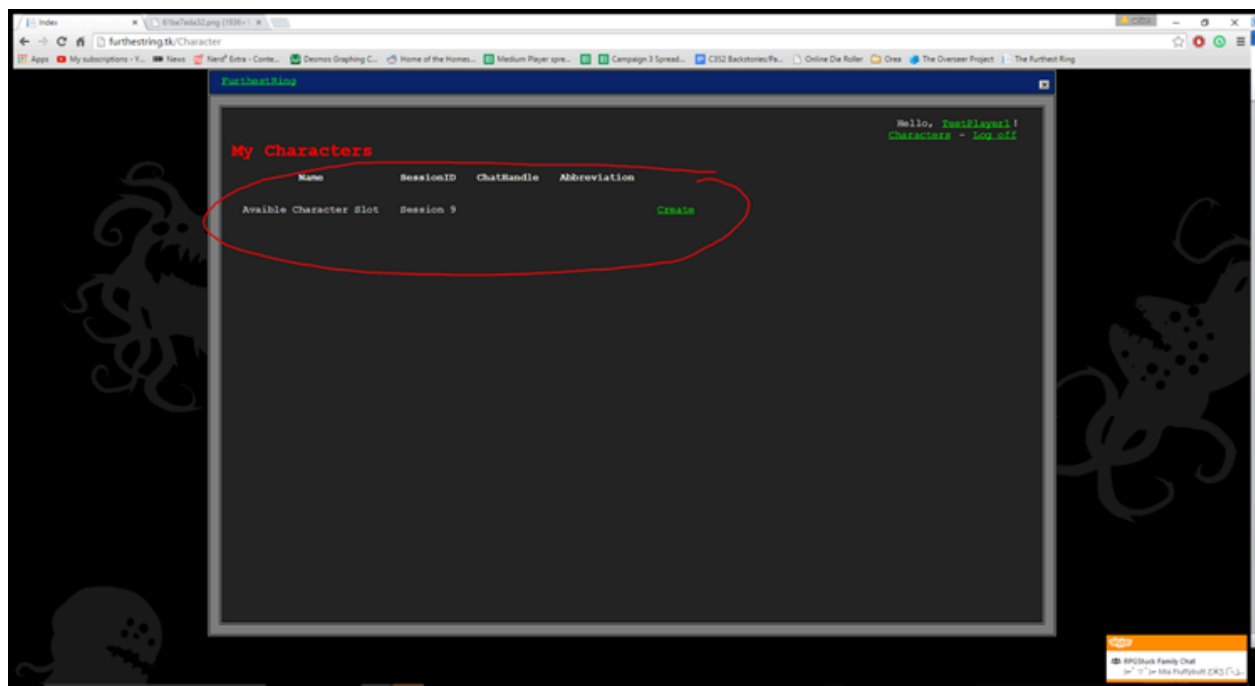

Now you should see something like this. This is where you now need to tell your DM your account name and your session. The DM can then add you to the session.

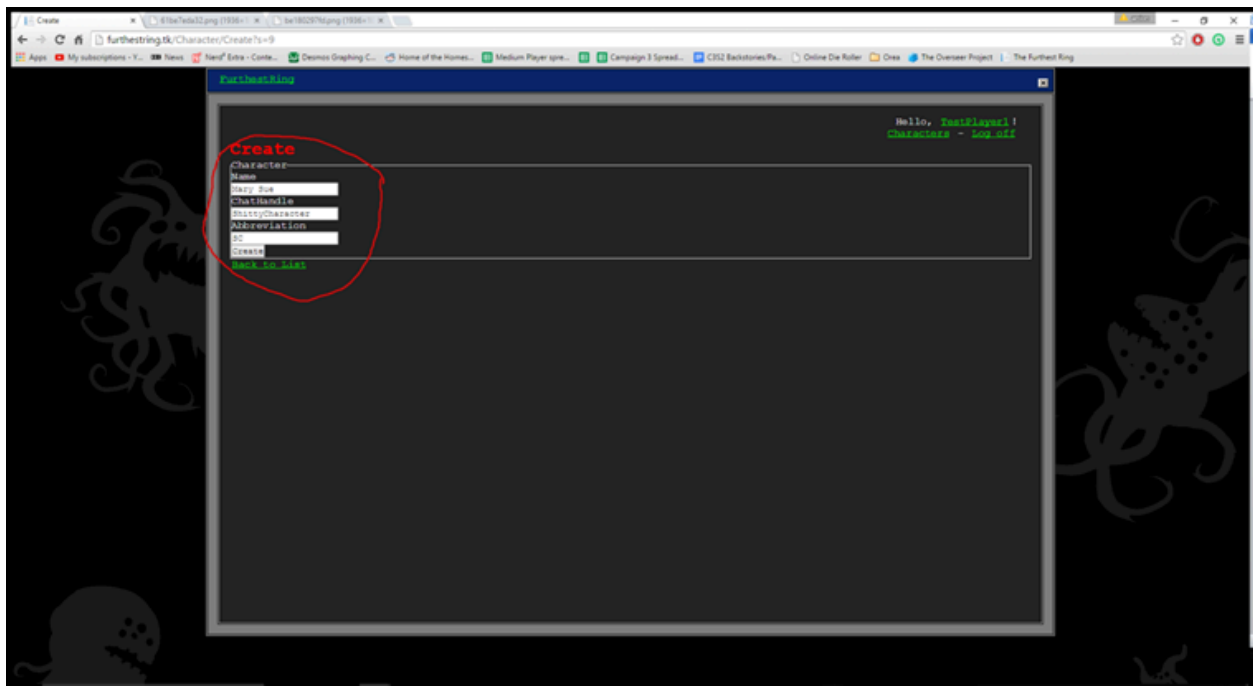

As you can see here, TestPlayer1 has not been given a session yet by their DM, so they do not have any characters listed.

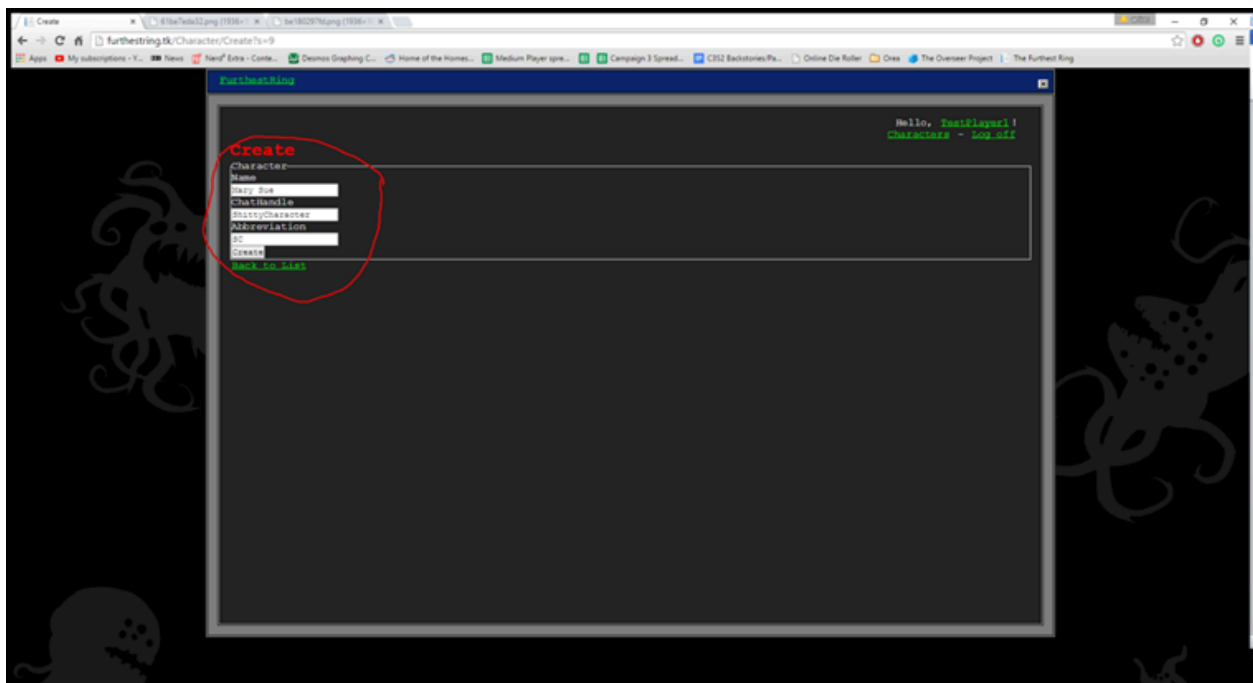

Because TestPlayer 1 has not been assigned a session yet, his DM, the ever benevolent and wise AnionCation, edits Session 9 – The Testening, to add TestPlayer 1 as a player. Players won't be able to edit or create sessions, so if you are a player you can ignore this. 'a' drawn there is figure A – It's what the name of the session is. Session number is self-explanatory.

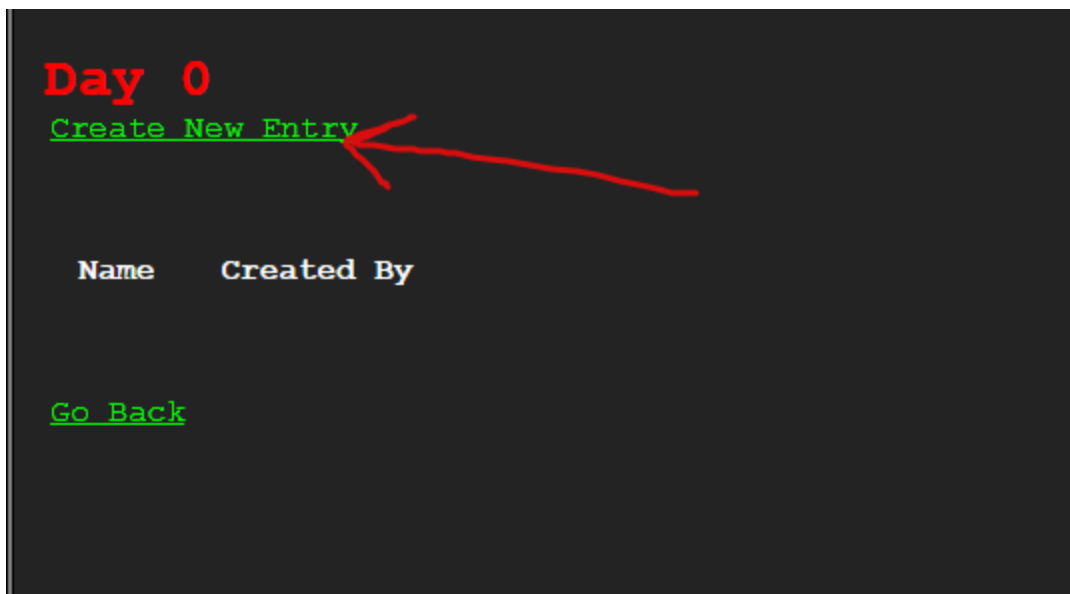

As you can see here, Fluffybutt is sending images, ahem TestPlayer1 now is set to be in session 9, so there is an available character slot. By pressing 'Create' he can then make a character. TestPlayer1 now has filled out the fields they need to fill out, and presses create. This has then created his character. Do not worry though! He can edit it at any time by going back to characters, and pressing Edit which is now there instead of create.

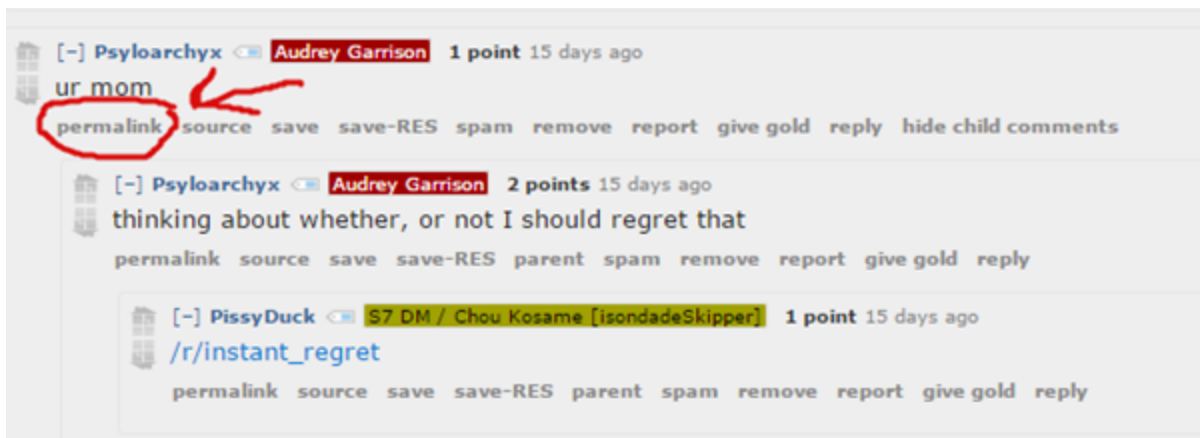

TestPlayer1 now clicks on Session 9 – The Testening from the session screen, and then clicks on the current update – Day 0. Now since its his character's update, he will click on his character.

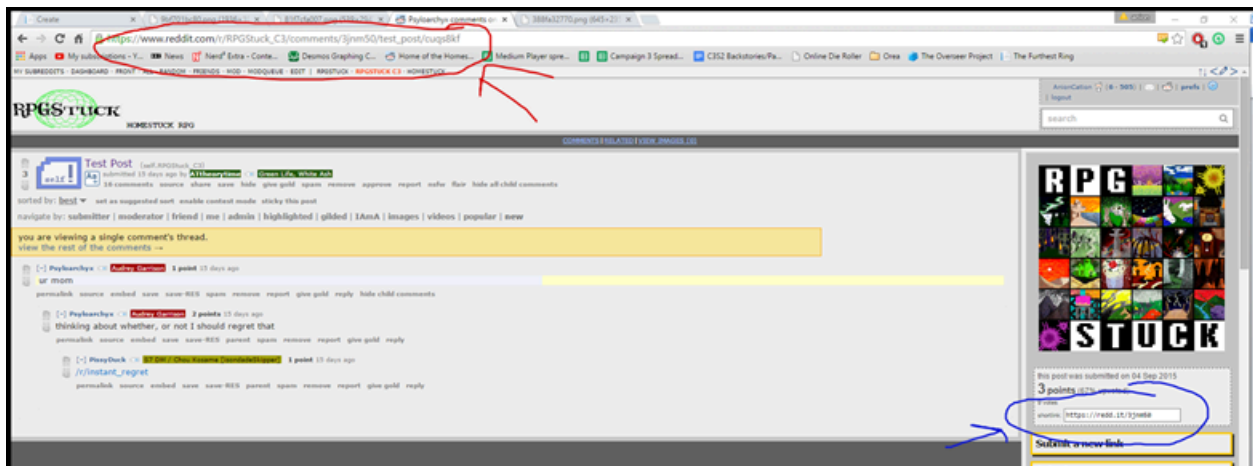

Next, He creates a new entry for his character.

Now he needs to find the URL of what he is linking, So he goes to what is obviously his day 0 post at https://www.reddit.com/r/RPGStuck_C3/comments/3jnm50/test_post/. However he doesn't want to link the entire post, he just wants the day 0 post.

To get this he clicks “permalink” on the start of the reddit post. This will give him a link in the url which is for that single thread of comments. He can then either copy the URL, or the shortlink. (URL is red, shortlink is blue)

Going with the shortlink, he then fills out his entry, and then presses create

As you can see, this page remains unchanged:

But if he clicks on his character, he will then see all of the entries for his character in that update.

Next he wants to upload the memo he just had with a co-player.

To do this he presses “Create new Entry” in the day 0 update – Not just his character.

He then titles it and pastes the URL of his memo pastebin, then presses create.

And as we can see, it was created successfully, and please note that all of these entries can be edited by pressing Edit.
