Women Who Heal The World

Introduction

Mission

To educate, heal, and organize with women to minimize climate chaos, defend democracy, and spread radical love.

Scope

The work is starting in St. Louis, Missouri with the openness for individuals in any community to engage with and use our resources to advance our mission.

Importance

Power and wealth at all costs are the governing principles for the majority of U.S. leaders. As a result, both democracy and Earth are dying.

The Republican supermajority in the Missouri General Assembly is largely following directives from national Republican leaders in the hopes of more power. The Republican Party no longer stands for the conservative values of "free trade, fiscal responsibility, personal character, respect for the law, [or] strong alliances,"[1] but instead has succumbed to obsession with power no matter the costs. Intelligent, strategic Christian Nationalists "created the Moral Majority, a political creation . . . to co-opt evangelicals into a Republican power bloc."[2] "[T]heir message[:] Republicans were the party of God and Democrats were the party of the devil."[3]

By the time Donald Trump ran for president, the "party that once claimed to be Lincoln's heir -- founded to oppose slavery's expansion, the push for Reconstruction, that under Teddy Roosevelt championed conservation, the estate tax, and checked corporate power —had already:

- Embraced the Southern Strategy, deliberately courting white racial resentment [via President Nixon]
- Turned dog whistles into bull horns in its rhetoric about crime, welfare, and immigration [via President Reagan]
- Married billionaire donors with evangelical Christians and an unholy alliance of plutocracy and theocracy [via Reagan and Bush]
- Transformed media from a source of shared facts into a propaganda machine [via both Presidents Bush]."[4]

An increasingly large number of elected officials are prioritizing the desires of corporations who fund their political campaigns over communities living now and into the future. Many of these corporations are causing natural resource degradation, rising temperatures, and increased extreme weather events globally. These realities are causing increased hunger, illness, housing instability, economic hardship, and

[1] The Last American President (2025), Thom Hartmann, p. 36.
[2] Jim Wallis, Chair in Faith & Justice, McCourt School of Public Policy, Georgetown
[3] Narrator of Bad Faith Documentary
[4] The Last American President (2025), Thom Hartmann, p. 44.

more. The United States is largely responsible. Christian nationalists are largely responsible for the direction of the United States government. Without action to save democracy, our planet will crumble and marginalized communities will continue to suffer the greatest harm. Faith-based voters need love and empathy to realize the wool over their eyes and then support and direction to vote differently.

The strength of starting in a place like St. Louis lies in its complexity, offering a rare blend of international influence and local conviction that is ready to be harnessed. Rather than seeing a collection of separate interests, we see a mosaic of power waiting for a common thread to bind it. By fostering a culture of collaboration across every zip code and background, we are building a foundation for sustainable change that starts here and resonates globally. WWHW feels called to work in community to take back our government from corporate control, help women reclaim their power, and mobilize women into social justice action as a form of radical love. We hope to add value to the existing ecosystem where communities of color, religious orders, non-profit organizations, and many churches have already been working for decades. We are humbly seeking to provide a space for women we know to reclaim their power and organize in the name of democracy, climate justice, and radical love.

Vision & Core Values

Vision

The United States is run by electeds who uphold democratic values, prioritize the health and wellbeing of all its communities, curtail personal and corporate degradation of our planet, and advance policies to minimize further climate chaos.

Core Values

- Openness and Empathy - we all have things to learn and unlearn
- Community and Collaboration - many have been doing this work longer than we have. Together, we can strengthen the threads of the rope that will pull down the patriarchy and capitalism.

Long-term objectives

→ Authoritarianism is quashed in the United States.

→ Laws, regulations, and court case decisions secure a future where people and their environment are safe and taken care of.

→ Women are empowered to use their talents to better their lives and the lives of those around them.

Strategy

Focus areas

→ Educate about democracy, equitable solutions to address climate change, and systems change. This involves inspiring and persuading both everyday people and decisionmakers to act.

→ Facilitate healing from patriarchal conditioning and reclaiming the power within women to create change

→ Organize women and their circles of influence to act in defense of democracy and climate justice.

Focus Areas

Education

One on one connections with individuals, webinars, film screenings, letters to the editor, radio interviews, and more.

Healing

Includes creative expression through art, manifestation, intention setting, reiki, tarot and spirit work, and more.

Organizing

Trainings, webinars, protests, rallies, advocacy events, lobby events, candidate forums, canvassing, petition signature gathering, and more.