

There is a chance we'll get some views of London from the camera. The problem is the cloud cover, so if it's cloudy at we're not going to see that much.

But if we get some breaks at those clouds, we might get views of right across London. And in fact, we launch at we've done before it's been possible to see as far as France from that altitude. So if we're lucky, we might get some views of London. The prediction is for the flight to go to the north.

So at will be going away towards Cambridge from North London. But if we're lucky, we might get some views of London from.