Good Riddance, Polkadot. Take Your Liberalism Elsewhere

Commentary by: Dan Schmidt @dschmidt

As you have no doubt heard, former Republican Representative and Vice Presidential nominee Polkadot48 is turning her back on the party. While in the party, she was always known as a force for “moderatism”, preferring the even decay of moral society to the accelerated decay of moral society. Her reasoning for leaving? Being rightfully attacked by fellow conservatives for not upholding conservative values.

It's time that we conservatives face the uncomfortable truth: Polkadot48 and all of the so-called moderates like her are nothing more than Democrats in sheep's clothing. I'm glad they've finally shed the false wool. This statement, however controversial it is, is nothing short of the absolute truth.

Is Polkadot a Republican?

Don't believe that Polkadot is a Democrat? Let's take a look at her beliefs, shall we? In this segment, I'll rank her important beliefs on a scale of Republican (0) to Not Republican (10). We'll see where she ends up.

Polkadot is pro-choice. That means she supports the mass murder of infants. Over 40 million children are killed before birth every year in the barbaric practice of abortion. No self-respecting Republican could ever support the horrific practice that is abortion. Anyone who claims to be pro-choice and a conservative is a fraud. But that's not really what we're here for. We're here to rank her beliefs. Here's my ranking: 9 - Heavily Democrat

Polkadot supports gay marriage. While there was once a time when conservatives, even liberals, both united against this heinous butchering of the traditional institution of marriage, that time has passed. I still personally find it quite offensive, but the masses do not. I rate this 4 - Center Right

Polkadot supports transgender “rights”. Not only is this a tremendous butchering of the meaning of rights, as enshrined in our constitution and Anglo-Saxon classical liberal heritage, but a better question is why should we be extending privileges to a group that the majority of Americans refuse to acknowledge or support? I rate this 7 - Liberal Mainstream

Polkadot doesn’t support the traditional family. Instead, she supports single-parenthood, extra-marital cohabitation, and all manner of degenerate alternative lifestyles. The family is the bedrock of conservatism and any attempts to subvert it are an attack on conservatism itself. With that being said, our society now sadly accepts many of these, even while acknowledging their flaws. Rating: 5 - Centrism

Polkadot doesn’t support free speech. Fairness doctrine? What’s next, liberal safe spaces? Get out of here jack! 10 - Communist Subversion

Conclusion

This was a brief and somewhat humorous analysis of former Representative Polkadot’s ideological inclinations. While this may not be 100% accurate, it does paint a general picture that will suffice: Polkadot is not a conservative, she is not a moderate, she is a liberal who has no place in the Republican party. This is not meant to be an in-depth analysis, for her beliefs do not deserve to see the light of day, especially not in such a manner that an analysis would require. They are a betrayal of everything the GOP holds dear.

I completely and unequivocally offer up my praise and adulations for the Republicans who pushed for the expulsion of moderates. ProgrammaticallySun7, Melp8836, and others will be remembered as true heroes for protecting the integrity of conservatism, even against the fury of the raucous liberal mob. Polkadot48 is a liberal, and I, for one, am not sorry to see her go. To the former Representative, I have only one thing to say, one opinion that I will hold near and dear to my heart: Polkadot, may your career die in the raging flames of the moral decay that you have accelerated through your abhorrent actions and policies.

Good riddance, Polkadot. We’ll all be better off without you.
