

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Organically Grown Wine Conference Announces 2026 Dates: April 20 + 21

Portland, OR | February 20, 2026 | The 2026 Organically Grown Wine Conference will return this spring for a two-day celebration of organic viticulture and winemaking. Building off the successful inaugural 2025 conference, attendees can expect farmer-led learning and collaboration geared towards growers, producers, media, buyers, and other stakeholders who care about quality, sustainability, and authenticity of wine. Scheduled for April 20 + 21, 2026, the conference will spotlight innovation in the vineyard and market, featuring curated tastings, field tours, and conversations about the future of organically grown wine.

Two Days:

- April 20 – Media, Buyers & Stakeholders: Trade professionals, distributors, retailers, sales teams, press, and policy leaders explore market trends, labeling, and strategic discussion on scaling, and policies that support organically grown wine production, while tasting new releases from producers in the Organic Winegrowers Network.
- April 21 – Peer-to-Peer Learning: Vineyard managers, winemakers, and growers gather for technical workshops and on-site demonstrations of organic practices—soil health, biodiversity, and practical strategies for certification and transition.

“Organically grown wine is no longer niche—it’s a driver of quality and authenticity and is one of the fastest-growing segments of the wine market,” said Rob Schultz, founder of the Organic Winegrowers Network. “This conference brings together the people shaping that future, from vineyard to marketplace.”

The Organically Grown Wine Conference builds on the collaborative spirit found throughout the Willamette Valley and will take place at learning institutions such as Chemeketa Community College and Linfield University, as well as at Soter Vineyards, Alexana Estate and Stillwater.
