ADOLESCENCE

Borned in 98' in Seoul, South Korea. Ryo Hoon being the youngest out of 3 other children, his parents didn't love him as much except his brother who he thought of as a best friend. Growing up Ryo had to move to the States, due to tensions between the South and North, Ryo parents were on the verge of a divorce. His father didn't want to leave the South Korean Air Force, his mother wanted something new.

Ryo moved to the states with his mother while his siblings stayed with the father. His father was too busy with work, and couldn't spend time with his three other kids. Getting into Ryo's teenage years, He was also most done with his high school years, he saw few Airmen recruiters, at his school in Garber High, Bay County Michigan. He talked to them, he wanted to do something else since he saw the world burn, and America needed help.

PRE-FOUNDATION ADULthood

So, after high school Ryo enlisted into the United States Air Force, he went to college in Pilot School, Engineering and Aviation School. After enlisting into the Air Force, he was assigned to 5th Reconnaissance Squadron, he flew reconnaissance missions, gathering information, he was trained with stealth flight, and other obstacles that path his way.

Serving from his enlistment date, to some years ago, he was promoted to Airmen Sergeant. He flew missions that he was ordered not to know, which he kept to himself. On these missions he wasn't notified on what he was doing, he sat there doing his job, to protect the national security of the United States. He was assigned to a plane named "Dragon Lady" which he seemed okay with, but he personally named it "Blackbird" taking the name of the stealth SR-71 Blackbird. He always found that jet interesting and loveable to have or fly. Due to nature, he knew he would never fly one but he kept to his dream to own a SR-71 Blackbird, and keep it as his own.

RECRUITMENT TO PRESENT

One night, he was flying like a regular flier doing his mission, suddenly his radar was cut from the control tower, the Command at the Air Force Base, was seeing that Ryo radar went offline. Was he hack? Shot and killed? They dispatched two F-22 Raptors to find a missing pilot and a plane.

They came up with nothing, Ryo was in another world but in the same world, he had to land. The moment he got out, and walked a few inches, he looked back at his plane and realized it was gone. From this he ends up passing out, a few MTF operatives, saw him in his gear and took him back to a near-by site. Getting him better, Ryo was panicking, telling them he needs to head home before he gets chewed out by command. They couldn't afford him to reveal secrets. They took action, telling him he couldn't leave. He had no choice, As far as the Air Force was concerned he was marked as dead in line of duty.

He was left with no options, but they offered him to join a MTF to continue his flying days. As they could tell he loved to fly and serve. Being offered, he was offered to join Sigma-9 "The Valkyries" as they were like the US Air Force. Deciding, but he took it, and went off to flight school and other training courses. Aftering passing he spent six years serving the MTF force. He gained the nickname "Blackbird" due to painting his whole jet completely black. Since he wanted to keep to his reconnaissance missions, he needed a stealth and fast jet so he chosen the F-22A "Raptor" as his jet, to do reconnaissance, as he was skilled in engineering, he made so where his Raptor was un-dedicated at all, a lot better than a normal F-22.

From here on out, he kept serving the Sigma-9s, as an Operative if promotions came to him he would mostly deny them.

DO NOT CORRUPT VOICE FILE –

Hoon: “This is Sergeant Hoon, ready for takeoff, Tower.” Ryo spoke to the United States Air Force Base tower preparing to take off.

Traffic Tower: “You're ready to go, enjoy flying” Tower spoke back to hoon.

Hoon: “Thank you, Tower” Hoon took off flying, doing one of his daily reconnaissance missions.

Two hours passed, Hoon was on his way back to the Air Force Base, until his radar tracker went offline in the Tower. They call multiple times. Hoon was wondering if he tried to call back but nothing. Hoon started to panic finding his way home it seemed he was lost. The Air Force dispatched two F-22's Raptor to find a missing Sergeant, and an old jet.

Time passed on so Hoon had to land somewhere. Once he landed he walked a few inches away from his jet and it disappeared, from this was he getting dizzy? Sick? He collapsed and passed out. MTF Operatives arrived on scene to find an anomaly, they found hoon, they decided to take him back to a nearby site to treat him aid.

Doctor: “Ah you're awake, how was your sleep.” Doctor asked calmly and nicely.

Hoon: “I need to get back to my Air Force base or-or my c-command would k-kill me” Panicking but the Operatives held me down to the bed to calm me.

Doctor: “I'm sorry, but you can't leave, we don't want you to spill our secrets to the whole world.” Doctor spoke

Hoon: “Then what will I do then?” Spoke a little sassy

Doctor: “I can point you to a MTF called “Sigma-9” It's an Air Force like the one you serve” Doctor spoke once again after reviewing his file.

Hoon: “Sounds fun.. But.. sure I guess” He agreed.

Hoon was allow to leave the med bay, and he was sent off to Flight school, or whatever he was going to be trained on, passing that and becoming an Clearance 2 Operative, he took a F-22 Raptor, painted all black took the system that the jet at currently and updated it to a better system where he does not exist on radar.

For 6 years he served as an Sigma-9 Reconnaissance Pilot, dodging any promotion he could as he wanted to stay as a C2 Operative that's where all of the fun will be, soon enough his peers started to call him the “Blackbird” and he was somewhat respected and scary, around the site due to his 6 year service as a pilot and what his jet would do. He will not allow anyone else to fly his jet except him.
