

Yao Lu, pianist, has performed solo recitals and collaborative piano recitals in China and the United States. She works at Malone University as an adjunct faculty. She is a visiting professor at Chuzhou University in China. She worked for Opera workshops and Cleveland Opera theater as a pianist. She worked as a staff pianist and teacher at The University of Akron and Kent State University and a faculty at Aurora School of Music and Avon School of Music.

She was the winner of the Marjorie Neville Collaborative Piano Award competition in 2016. Her awards include being given a full graduate teaching assistantship and Outstanding Graduate Student in Piano award from the University of Akron. She was also inducted into the honorary society of Pi Kappa Lambda and was a recipient of a scholarship for The SongFest Music Festival. She finished her artist diploma at Cleveland Institute of Music and master degree in Piano performance at University of North Texas and University of Akron.

Also, she earned her certificates in Health Coach and Naturopathic Doctor. She has started My Complete Health which is a natural health clinic aimed at restoring the health of clients instead of treating disease symptoms.