

Roleplay Boundaries List

One - Please ask/tell me before your character crushes on one of mine, I am personally uncomfortable when no one tells me that their oc is into one of mine due to personal experiences I will not go into! This also applies to friends and found family, but admiration and acquaintances are something I don't need an alert on as they're a different situation.

[Sidenote, for general things like 'my oc dislikes yours' and 'my oc thinks yours seems like a good person', I don't need to be alerted!]

Two - NO NSFW ROLEPLAYS, I am uncomfortable with that!

Three - Please communicate with me for plots involving my characters, I prefer knowing what will happen so I can prepare for it! This also includes things such as informing me if your character is ableist/lgbtphobic/ect

Four - Remember to keep certain things ic, such as a rejection not going well or lgbtphobia [like, your ocs can misgender one of mine and use the wrong pronouns, but don't do that OOC! If it is accidental, that is fine, just don't make it a habit!]

If I feel you go against any of these, I will talk to you about it first, with the exception of rule two, but if it continues OR is rule two, I will likely stop roleplaying with you for my own comfort and/or safety