

Kathy M. Lippert, Ph.D.

Dr. Lippert has been an internal and external organization development consultant since 1975 specializing in culture change, creation of teams that produce outstanding results, globalization of the workplace, establishment of mutually satisfying and empowering relationships between management and employees while fostering true learning environments. Her worldwide clients range from small groups to corporations, not-for-profit organizations, government and unions.

Having received her doctorate in Organizational Behavior and Consultation, Kathy has served as a faculty member in the American University/NTL Institute Master of Science in Organization Development program and in the graduate and undergraduate departments at several universities and colleges.

The value of empowering others runs deep throughout her work. Inclusion and appreciation for the positive are hallmarks of the work she does. Besides consulting, training, teaching, and mentoring, Dr. Lippert has written and published articles and chapters on group process and change.

Kathy has recently completed a two-year term (2021-2023) as Chair of NTL Institute's Board of Directors and served on NTL's Board for five years. She resides with her family and two golden retrievers in Cincinnati, Ohio, USA.
