Species: Kalak (100%), Zaba

Description: She is a very dark colored kalak - the chocolate that paints most pups never got diluted from her fur, although it did redden some. In the sun, her pelt shimmers a dark russet gleam, but in the absence of light, she appears almost completely black. She prefers to call herself a delicious raspberry chocolate. Ebony paints all of her limbs up to her carpi (elbows) and tarsi (hocks) respectively. A line of ivory creeps up her abdomen, her nape, and paints the bottom of her mandible in addition to the tip of her tail. Her claws gleam a bright silver color and many who fight her find that they are just as hard as metal.

And finally, there is her face. If she were a normal wolf, her bright blue eyes would be remarkably stunning and odd, given her breed. But she is a Zaba and has three marks crested upon her face. Over her right eye is her mother's mark, over her left eye is her father's mark, and her own is over the bridge of her snout.
