

Hello and welcome to our BLM Resources for Support and Education page!

As the protests were starting to ramp up in both intensity and duration, there was (and still is) a plethora of information being propagated all over social media. I kept reposting things, putting them in my BLM highlights, etc. but it really quickly became difficult to keep track of all the different kinds of resources that I might want to access later. I figured other people might be having this issue as well so I created this page for myself and whoever else might benefit from it in some way.

I say “our” in reference to this page with explicit intention because I created this document in a collaborative spirit. Anyone with the sharing link can view and edit it. This is meant to be a safe space in every meaning of that phrase as we wrap our minds around these issues and work towards active anti-racism. So this goes without saying – but here I am saying it – this is under no circumstances a place that will tolerate any hate, bigotry, xenophobia, or negativity. Only constructive criticism and positivity.

Thanks for stopping by and taking a look, I hope you are able to find something new and interesting or even just what you were looking for. If you have any comments, suggestions, or even just want someone to talk to, feel free to send me an email (jjunkymunkyy@gmail.com) or message (Instagram: @mossheartclips [I also have a lot more helpful BLM-related things on my Instagram BLM highlights]).
