

Practice FRQ: Internal Migration

When most people think of migration they imagine a scenario in which a person travels a great distance between two countries. This is not the only type (or even the most common) type of migration.

A. Define “internal migration.”

B. With reference to internal migration in TWO specific nations, discuss the following:

- (i) the historic distribution of the population.
- (ii) the way in which the population is currently being redistributed.
- (iii) reasons for which the population is migrating (push/pull factors).
