

Sabeen Abbas

Sabeen Abbas is a strategic leader with extensive experience in governance, organizational growth, operations, and community engagement. Throughout her career, she has helped organizations translate vision and strategy into effective action while building strong partnerships among diverse stakeholders. She brings particular expertise in board governance, strategic planning, organizational effectiveness, and community engagement.

Sabeen has a strong history of board and community service. She previously served as Board Chair and Vice Chair of Roswell Community Masjid, providing leadership in governance, strategic planning, board development, community programming, and leadership transitions. She also volunteers with the Georgia Institute of Technology, interviewing scholarship candidates based on leadership, academic achievement, and potential.

Professionally, Sabeen serves as Managing Director of Hatch Line Consulting, advising startups and small businesses on growth strategy, operations, commercialization, and scalable processes. Her previous experience includes leadership positions with The Coca-Cola Company, Kids II, and Honda, where she led complex initiatives involving strategy, cross-functional collaboration, product development, operations, and organizational growth. Sabeen holds an MBA in Global Business from Georgia Tech's Scheller College of Business and a B.S. in Mechanical Engineering from the University of Alabama. She brings to the Board a commitment to thoughtful governance, educational opportunity, and building strong organizations and communities.