²It is also possible that Passo Fundo, Pelotas, Rivera, or Livramento may be the choice.

Note: In October 2022, President Nelson shared the Church's plan to announce multiple temples in major metropolitan areas where travel to existing temples presents an undue hardship. He then explained that Mexico City Mexico, would be the first major city to have multiple temples announced simultaneously. Based on research about that announcement, the following metropolitan areas seem likely to have multiple temples simultaneously announced in future General Conferences: São Paulo and Rio de Janeiro Brazil, Buenos Aires Argentina, Manila Philippines, and Santiago Chile. Since I don't have access to any data pointing to which of these cities might be the next to have multiple temples announced, I won't be able to predict the order in which those cities could have multiple temples announced, nor will I venture more specific predictions for locations within any of these metropolitan areas.

Result: During President Oaks' concluding remarks, he announced that, due to the many temples (over 100 in number) that are in the earliest stages of planning, and with the approval of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles, the Church would not be announcing any temples during the October 2025 General Conference.
