

Welcome Elder, Hunter profile retrieved.

Hunter Name: Ja'Toor

Clan: Ek'thok

Gender: Male

Age: 186 years old

Height: 7'9

Weight: 426 KG

Greetings, honored elder; this is the profile of the newest hunter joining us on our ship. You will find all of the details below.

Ja'Toor has only recently passed his clan's blooding trial, 7 years ago to be exact. During the trial, he was ambushed by his R'ka opponent; fortunately, even under the effects of the special herb, he was able to react just fast enough to barely evade, leaving the serpent to only score a glancing blow, and having committed to the attack, the serpent was left off balance and open to a counterattack, to which Ja'Toor took advantage and struck a killing blow to the serpent, planting his axe firmly in the back of its neck and claiming its skull as a trophy.

It's important to note that the reason Ja'Toor was given his blooding trial so young is because his mother, Elite Ver'Toor Ek'thok, who is great friends with the clan leader Va'stba, requested he be given his trial early. Va'stba graciously accepted this request with the stipulation that if he failed the trial (assuming he survived), he'd be exiled from the clan and Ver'Toor would lose her Elite Status; fortunately for them both, he did not fail.

He holds Kehrite Bhu'ja in the highest regard among the pantheon. And can often be found exercising and training his body. Ja'Toor is noted to have a tendency to challenge prey to melee duels, often disarming himself if his chosen opponent is weaker than himself (such as humans). He has yet to fully shake off the overconfidence and inexperience of youth, often being seen as brash, even reckless at times. Putting himself in situations that wiser hunters would not have found

