Introduction

Jeff the Killer is a Creepypasta character, portrayed as a noseless and pale-faced man without eyelids and black loops around his eyes. This character became famous with its image, used as an internet screamer, and over time grew to a widespread Creepypasta. The image is a composite of someone's unedited face, the identity of which is unknown, but believed to have once existed on the Internet. The modern version of the Creepypasta was created in 2011, but the original version was written on October 3rd, 2008 by the YouTube user Sesseur and gained over 700,000 views. It has since been removed due to copyright claims. Sesseur, also known as "killerjeff", posted the image on the Newgrounds forums and claimed that the image was, in fact, a picture of himself.

Later it was discovered that Sesseur lied, and the image was of Japanese origin. Since the search started, two versions of the image have been discovered:

JTK1

JTK2

We will refer to these images as JTK1 and JTK2. JTK1 is an earlier iteration of the famous Jeff The Killer image. These two images have been reposted many times over the years.

JTK2 was first posted on a Japanese website named pya.cc on 16th November 2005 by the user "Omega Volt" and was titled "(Kowa) Ahyahyahya !!!". The image was captioned "Which one are you afraid of?" which is linked to an earlier post of JTK1 from the same website made by "Mr Mulholland". We are pretty much certain that JTK2 was created by Omega Volt. Unfortunately, he is as big of an enigma as the image itself, so we weren't able to find him.

The earliest upload of JTK1, so far, is on a website called Fileman under the name “Fear of summer nights ...” and the description “A celebrity before plastic surgery...”.

It is not clear if the post description is related to the image's origin, or if it was just given to add an interesting backstory. Xaft, one of our Discord members, managed to find the thread attached to the Fileman post and some of the comments mention seeing the image on other sites, suggesting that there were previous posts. The image later appeared on other image boards and forums such as gazo05.chbox.jp gamushara.net, blog.livedoor.jp/warata2ki pya.cc, and more, along with hundreds of reposts on 2channel (now under the URL of 5ch.net), mainly with the purpose of scaring people. It is believed that JTK1 might have come from one of the following websites: wibo, 2chan or futaba. For who is interested in reading the complete timeline, it can be found at the end of this document or in this google sheet:

<https://docs.google.com/spreadsheets/d/1V7QX33SXJR-S6O0yf0GBR8aW0g4fv-RkcKcWxabvAGw/edit?usp=sharing>

While searching for the original image, we found multiple people that either reposted the edited versions in 2005 or we are confident that they saw the unedited image in 2005. Their testimonies will be discussed in the next chapter.

Contacting witnesses

1. Miyama:

Miyama or Mr. Mulholland posted JTK1 on 10th September 2005 on the website pya.cc under the name “White Powder”. We have contacted Miyama (Mr Mulholland) on Twitter, and he told us that in mid-2005, a cropped image of a video of a middle-aged Asian woman appeared in Japan. Her face was very white. This image was a Japanese meme, being posted on various bulletin boards on shitaraba.com as a surprise image. Miyama took JTK1 and made minor edits, such as brightness correction; the modified version can be found on sorai.jp. Miyama does not have the original image, and he believes that the original video doesn’t exist on the internet anymore, but he told us that he believed that the video was from a show named ほんとにあった! 呪いのビデオ (Honto ni Atta! Noroi no Video). We managed to find all episodes that aired between 1999 and 2005, but unfortunately, it looks like the JTK image is not from this series. If you would like to watch this series, we have all the videos saved in a Google Drive:

https://drive.google.com/drive/folders/1Vzw7HD1dgg4xHR8X4kU9FPDb_dAfjvO_

There have also been multiple people claiming that this image is from a variety show.

Other people think that the original image is Tamao Takamura when she was young in a dressing room.

We think the Tamao Nakamura rumour started from karapaia, a japanese blog.

Source: <https://karapaia.com/archives/52194451.html> (comment 63)

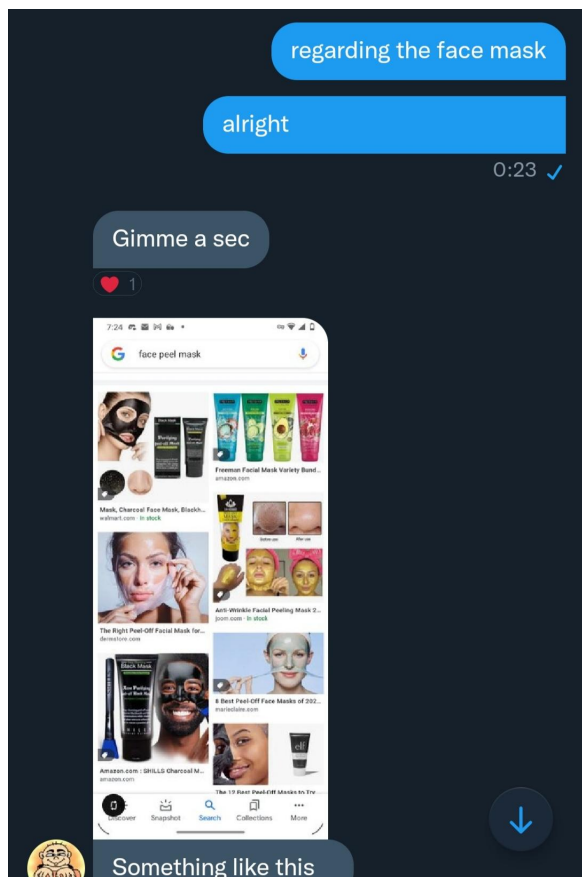

I'm sure that 7 is a doctored photo of Tamao Nakamura taken backstage when she was younger. The photo she took when she was a guest on Hanamaru Market looked exactly like the background, or maybe it was just a blurred version of her smile that made her look this crazy.

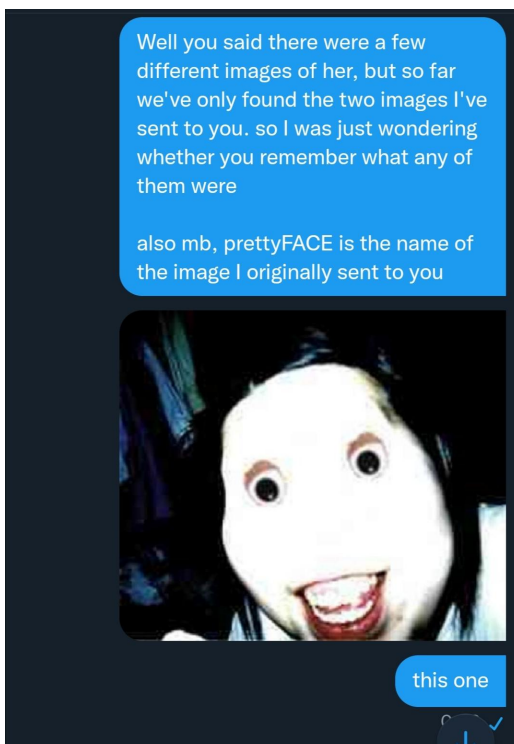

All of Miyama's twitter posts will be added in an annex at the end of this document. If you believe we missed anything important for this search, contact us on the official Reddit or Discord.

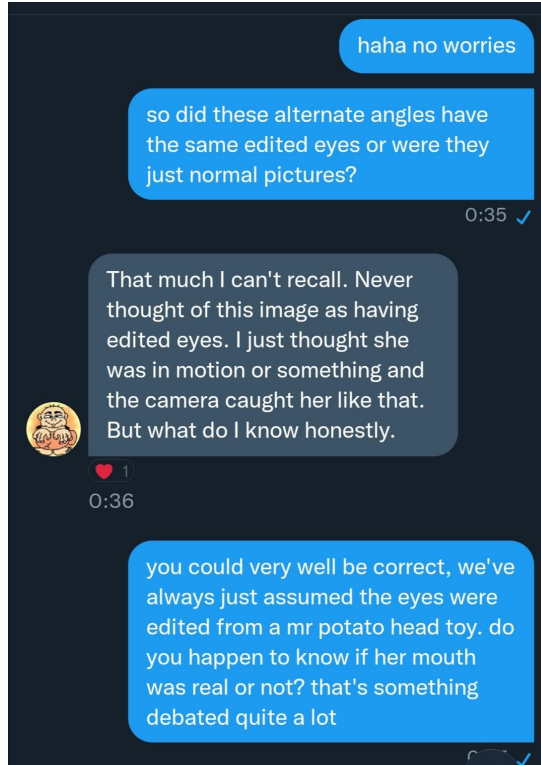

2. MightyOmnivore:

Discord user My little emo found the image link <http://i2.photobucket.com/albums/y33/MightyOmnivore/prettyFACE.jpg> (dead & unarchived) on <https://www.speedguide.net/forums/showthread.php?187092-Some-Funny-Weird-Pics>, while searching for the term prettyFACE.jpg. Then, PerditusRedux found the twitter of the person that uploaded the image (MightyOmnivore) and contacted him. He responded and confirmed that it was JTK1. Below are their conversations:

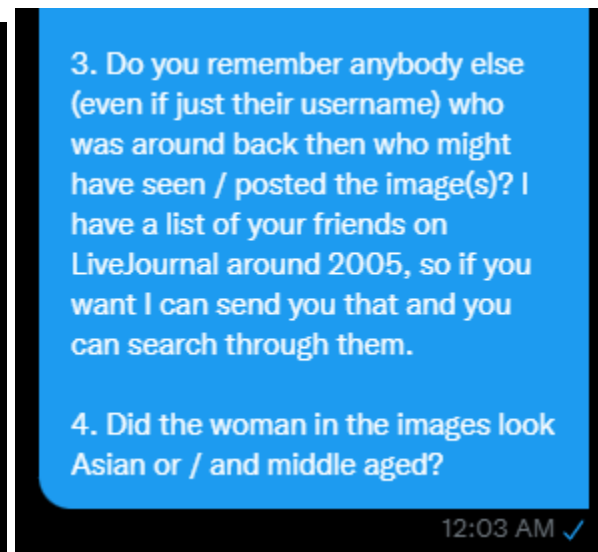

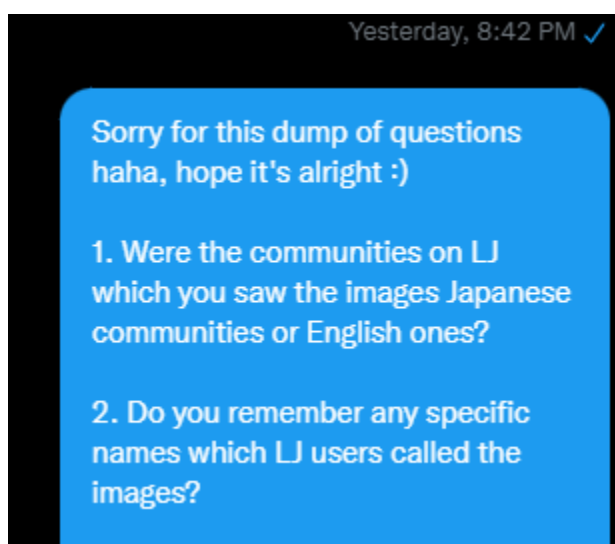

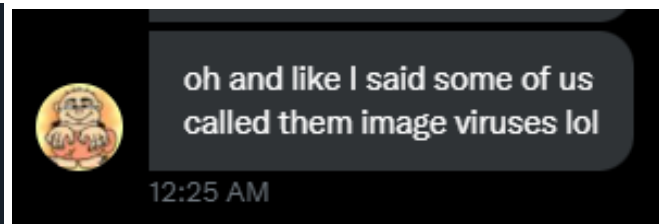

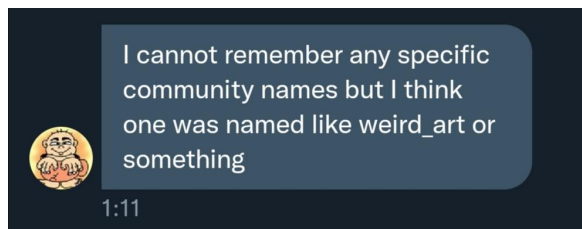

PerditusRedux started contacting other members of the weird_crap community on LiveJournal. One of the members confirmed seeing JTK1, but she didn't remember where she saw the image.

Hi there,

Yes, I did run the weird_crap community on live journal. I do remember the image but sadly not specifics to where it would have. I created that community back in the day to share just the most unbelievable weird things I would stumble on- not sure how - I should still have access to the accounts, what specifically are you looking for?

Traumntt, one of our discord members, tried contacting Photobucket Support Team to find out if they have any backups of the MightyOmnivore image on their servers. It looks like it was removed for breaking TOS.

Hi there,

Thanks for reaching out. First, I want to let you know that the account with username MightyOmnivore is currently dormant. I checked our servers for the image prettyFACE.jpg, and it isn't on our servers. There are 800+ images showing for the account, so it appears that one was removed. If it was removed individually by Photobucket, the only reason we would have done so is for violating our Terms of Use. Otherwise, it may have been previously removed by the account owner.

MightyOmnivore wasn't able to find an image related to JTK on his old hard drive, but he says some details about the filename:

 "mighty omnivore" 5 Jun 2022 15:07
so I got the drive to work but there were no new leads to be found just old vacation photos and pictures of ex girlfriends lol (edited) sorry guys

 "mighty omnivore" 6 Jun 2022 16:21
I found the picture off a Japanese website. the name probably wasn't "prettyFACE". I used to rename files I found online (not all the time but usually) odds are I probably named it that so I could find it on my old computer
it was otherwise a bunch of numbers

3. Cman:

The Militarist, one of our ex discord members, found some interesting comments under the video "Jeff the Killer's True Identity | Mini Mysteries" by Goose Boose. The user Cman is claiming to have seen the original image on 2ch/Futaba. He described the original image as being of a fat asian girl (obese), with long, black, oily and shiny hair, no makeup, terrible camera quality, having a dirty room with visible hanged clothes and a window covered by curtains.

Cman 1 year ago (edited)

As a guy who used to browse 2chan, I definitely know the original picture of Jeff the Killer and I can say that the girl in the picture is probably not Katy Robinson. Even though she does kind of look similar (obese, long black hair), the original girl was clearly an Asian and most likely a Japanese. I remember her not having any make up, her hair being more oily and shiny, with a terrible camera quality and a dirty room. The things behind Jeff the Killer is actually a hanged laundry. There was a thread in 2chan someone bringing image of her and started a photoshop contest, she probably was some rando uploading her own face in 2chan for attention in some kind of face reveal thread and OP probably saved that image because she's unattractive and wanted to ridicule her. Thread was nothing special, in fact it was really boring and forgettable that I doubt current 2chan (or 5chan, name changed due to the legal issues) users even remembers it. In the thread I remember seeing the original image, few jokey photoshops, including the ones that tried to make her look scary, and one of them was the image that's currently known as the face of Jeff the Killer.

While the thread itself was forgettable, the image caught on for a tiny bit and users on 2chan used it as a generic jump-scare image. Which went on to the hands of the guy who made the "NNN rinji housou" video, which is a video based on the Japanese urban legend of Japanese television station listing the names of "victims" before the station ended its airtime, video itself says it's a joke video based on the legend, and he just slapped the jumpscare at the end with the spooky image he happened to have on his computer. This is the reality of this situation, and yes I know, it's pretty boring.

@Gage Yeah the photo was clearly old, somewhere between 2000 ~ 2005, thread should've been somewhere around that time too. I saw an archive of that thread around 2009 ~ 2012, I forgot the name of the thread and like I stated, the thread was very generic and boring, it probably was archived for the sake of archiving it, and even if the archive still exist today, it will be very difficult to find it amongst all the other archives. I did try looking for it again in Japanese but it seems like current 2chan users don't remember it at all, and the funny thing is that many perceives the face as the Jeff the Killer, an American internet horror story. Rarely some do remember it was a generic spooky face used in Japanese internet back in the day, but nothing more. Also to add more to what the original picture looked like, the original image was just basically a same thing except the lighting was slightly brighter and it didn't have a painted face over it, it did look like a webcam photo too, the hanged laundry in the background was more clearly visible and you could see more of her room in the background, which was just a generic messy Japanese room.

I did not save it, or thought about any of this until now since I didn't know the origin of Jeff the Killer pic was a big deal, and people were struggling to find the original picture. Sorry that I severely lack proof, but I hope how boring the actual story is enough to convince some that it's real. I mean, at-least it's not ridiculous and fake as the Katy Robinson story, which is obviously a troll theory from 4chan.

Cman 1 year ago (edited)

@Gage I'm saying that the Katy Robinson (mexican girl) is NOT the original image of Jeff the Killer, and the real original image was some random Asian girl, who is obese like Katy Robinson, but had Asian facial feature, which is obscured by the heavy editing of the image, my point is that Katy Robinson is not the Jeff the Killer. It was years ago I don't remember the every detail of the photo, the room was dark, I think there was curtain shut behind her and you could see a sunlight coming out between those curtains, clearly visible hanged clothes, and a messy room, that's all I can remember.

Guy saying it was first appeared in 4chan is a troll story by a 4chan user and made up after the Jeff the Killer fiasco. I also really doubt unpopular image of 4chan that no English user can currently find, went and spread around 2chan (I'm talking about 2chan btw, not 2ch, 2ch is an image board and 2chan is a text board, 2 completely different sites), when there aren't many English-speaking people in Japan, and things like that is pretty uncommon because of it.

All the face part of Jeff is an edit, it's a joke to make it look creepy. The smiling mouth isn't real (probably taken from another picture and stretched to make it appear big), baggy eyes and white face is drawn with a paint software. She wasn't smiling, it was a generic picture of fat girl taking a selfie on her webcam. I know she looked obese because I saw the picture. As far as I know, there's only one picture, the girl probably took picture of her self for an attention and threw that image on 2chan (which isn't uncommon, especially back in the day), or took picture of herself to use it for her own blog. It doesn't really matter because the image isn't interesting aside from her being obese (which some small-brained 2chan user would find it a little amusing). No crazy backstory behind the image, I guess the edit some guy made as a joke ended up looking really creepy, that's about it.

@Gage Sorry I didn't mean 2chan (futaba channel, the image board), I meant 2ch (a text board, father of 2chan, site Hiroyuki used to own), I saw it on that site. I'm 120% sure it was Jeff, just look at the jeff the killer image, you can still see the hanging clothes at the back and a hint of a messy room. Was it uncropped? I am not 100% sure, it could've slightly zoomed into her face, but definitely not cropped and flipped in a way how people claim that it originated that image from the Katy Robinson picture.

The board was most likely (News sokuhou VIP), weird name I know but it was (and probably still is) a most popular board, and basically used like a random board like 4chan's /b/ and 2chan's nijiura. You could be right about her coming from Stickam though, I only assumed it was a selfie taken from some blog or selfie uploaded in the same site, just because OP just posted image of her and said something along the lines of "make her pretty". Photoshop contest like this happened a lot back then, and the original image usually originated from the sources I mentioned, it could be Stickam, but whatever it originated from, I'm pretty sure it's not interesting.

While there's a chance the archived could've been deleted, I still believe that it could still exist somewhere but it would be extremely difficult to find and probably not worth the effort, atleast I wouldn't be taking a big dive to look for it again, the thread was just too uninteresting and generic to spend hours and days looking for it.

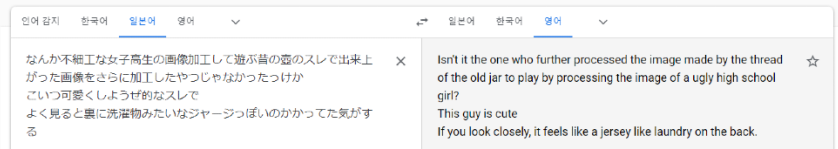

Cman 1 year ago (edited)

@Gage Archiving 2ch threads are really popular in Japan and there are thousands of archiving site despite some of them getting deleted due to the copyright quarrel between 2ch and some of the popular archiving sites. I don't remember which site I used because there are just too many to remember, I could list the popular ones that's still out there, but it would be a really low chance of finding the thread since the thread itself isn't really that interesting and it was just a generic photoshop contest thread, also some sites might have deleted older archives as they want to keep archiving new and interesting threads, they don't archive stuff for historic reasons, they archive whatever that gets clicks. If you are interested despite this, just tell me.

"News Sokuhou VIP" (now called "newsoku Vip" or known as a "VIP board" for short) is a 2ch board which started as the one of many News boards but it's known for users using that board as a random board and talk about random shit, the culture of random boards like /b/ and nijiura stemmed from this board, and it's the most popular board out of hundreds of boards in 2ch, and because of it, there are a lot of sites that archives threads from this board.

We believe these comments might be real because Cman knew about 2ch/Futaba and the image being reposted on 2ch as a scary image before we contacted Miyama. His description also aligned with other descriptions we found of the original image from japanese users. But we also found some discrepancies, of course after almost 20 years since the image was posted it's normal to misremember some things.

* 'jar' is a slang word stands for 2ch

55 22/03/22 (Tue) 21:18:30 No.909183855 ±

It wasn't the one who processed the image of the old jar that was made by processing the image of a ugly high school girl
. I feel like it was hanging

(futaba channel on 2022/03/22)

It is also rumored to be of an overweight Japanese girl in a room with hanging laundry who spammed her image across the Japanese image board, 2chan in 2004, before making it's way to 4chan throughout the later years, and there was a Photoshop contest where people took turns Photoshopping her photo to see how "good" they can make her look. Although this theory is still yet to be proven.

Image analysis

Firstly I will discuss some speculations we have about the original image, after that we will take a look at a more in-depth analysis of the edits that we have.

Multiple versions of the image exist; this is most likely how they were made:

1. Original image gets posted
2. Edit gets made
3. Edit gets made on top of another layer

Miyama's tweets seem to support this heavily. The image most likely comes from 2chan. Read this post from hotandcoldcoffee from the discord server related to the search:

"The origin of JTK is definitely 2chan/gazobox, or a website that uses a system similar to them. There are two types of image addresses for 2chan and gazobox. src or thumb. src is the actual image and thumb is a reduced thumbnail of the image. Reduced images are of poorer quality, and the width is usually scaled to 251. gazobox's JTK image also has a width of 251 and has the same level of quality as the thumb image. But the image address in gazo JTK uses src, not thumb. This means that a user of gazobox brought a thumbnail of JTK that was posted somewhere (possibly 2chan or gazobox) before the gazo05 post."

Terms used more than once by people referencing the image were いつもの画像 (the usual image), おたふく (otafuku mask), 白塗り (white makeup), 白粉 (white powder, used by geisha), オバQ (Obake no Q-Tarou, an anime/manga character), ノベック (face pack), and prettyFACE.

There have also been multiple eyewitnesses who have claimed to have seen the unedited image. Here are some accounts:

Personally, I'm more scared of this image before it became Jeff the Killer.

I can laugh at this image now, but during my summer vacation in 2005, I stepped on an image that was posted on a BBS for Galapagos called "Tarekomi", which was my favorite site at the time, and I was completely careless and stepped on it.

I'm not sure if the "tipster" site is the origin of this image or not, because I just saw it there. It may have been posted in various places as a mental blackout because of its strong impact.

A few years later, I saw the image of Jeff the Killer, but I had the impression that it was too processed and not scary enough. Now I miss a lot of things.

I've heard that the original image of Jeff Killer was processed because the background of Jeff Killer resembles a photo taken in the dressing room of Tamao Nakamura when she was young.

I seem to remember that the original image was a screen capture from a variety show around 2000... I think it was a close-up of the end of a comedy act, and it was further processed.

Comment by エクスカリバー:

"This image before Jeff the Killer is personally scarier back then. Nowadays, I laugh at it, but during the summer holiday in 2005, I was completely off guard when I was stuck on the BBS for feature phones called "Tarekomi", which was "interesting image". And it's still the number one image ranking that scared me. I just saw it there, so it's unclear if "Tarekomi" is the origin of this image. It may have been pasted as a shock image in various places because of how creepy it is.

Comment by ハム:

"I remember seeing the original image in a mess. I think it was an image of a normal female who was just a little fat and laughing. Perhaps it was a thread to put a Photoshop image, Jeff the Killer (which was not called by that name at that time) was pasted together with the original image, and I remember feeling sorry for it being made a Photoshop. Kora (?) has become famous, but since there is no one to put the original image on, it seems that the source is unknown."

A few years later, I saw an image of Jeff the Killer, but I was impressed that "something was overkill, and I wasn't scared at all." I miss many things now."

Comment by える:

"I'm sorry to say that Jeff the Killer was popular before spreading about in 2000. At that time, it wasn't called Jeff, and the original photo was said to be a Japanese woman (there was a person who said that she was a Chinese woman in the "rice" section of the occult summary site when I was researching the other day). The original story probably had a cosmetic mask on their face. There seems to be a theory that it is a picture of a female YouTuber."

<http://blog.livedoor.jp/tansokumery/archives/1011904696.html> claims to have seen the og image around 2004/05 on 2chan (now 5ch)

There is also major speculation that the image is based on Japanese folklore, with Kuchisake-onna (slit mouthed woman) being based on the prettyFACE name.

According to Wikipedia, the legend goes like this:

"According to popular legend, she asks potential victims if they think she is beautiful. If they respond with "no", she will kill them with her long medical scissors. If they say "yes", she will reveal that the corners of her mouth are slit from ear to ear, and she will then repeat her question. If the individual responds with "no", she will kill them with her weapon, and if they say "yes", she will cut the corners of their mouth in such a way that resembles her own disfigurement."

The width of the JTK picture found on gazo05 is 251 pixels, which is very similar to the thumbnail image of the Futaba channel. Thumbnail images in Futaba usually have a width of 250, but sometimes 251. There were many image boards that used futaba's source code, but the images from JTK had exif data saying "CREATOR: gd-jpeg v1.0 (using IJG JPEG v62), quality = 30.". As far as I know, only thumbnail images of Futaba show quality as 30. Perhaps the Futaba channel appears to be one of the original sources of JTK. There was a discussion about JTK on Futaba recently.

Some users on Futaba claimed to have seen the original JTK image. Here is notable testimony:

*Rumour that 'they were edited photos of a high school girl'. These claims are not unique to that thread. In 2021, I asked a Japanese YouTuber to write a thread on Futaba. Even at that time, there was an anon who claimed that JTK was an edited photo of a high school girl.

There must have been a flow of processing something like a high school girl's selfie, maybe it's a jar.

*Rumour that 'there was laundry in the room' - The 55th reply refers to "laundry". It seems to be the piece of clothing you see on the left. In the past, the Jeff The Killer article on the Screamer Wiki had a rumour that "It is also rumoured to be of an overweight Japanese girl in a room with hanging laundry who spammed her image across the Japanese image board, 2chan in 2004". 2chan is another name for Futaba channel, but it is recommended to refrain from using this name to avoid confusion with 2ch, an internet bulletin board that uses a similar name. (https://screamer.wiki/index.php?title=Jeff_the_Killer&oldid=96782)

*Rumours that 'witnessed original JTK on 2ch' - That thread claims to have seen the original JTK image in a 'jar'. 'Jar' is a slang term for 2ch in Futaba. Previously, there were testimonies that 2ch had witnessed the original JTK in 2004 or 2005.

(<http://blog.livedoor.jp/tansokumery/archives/1011904696.html>)

In gazo05's JTK, exif data of "Resolution Unit : inches , X Resolution : 72Y , Resolution : 72" also existed, but this is not the data attached to the thumbnail image of Futaba. It looks like it's probably been uploaded to gazo05 through one pass from Futaba to another website. A JTK image uploaded recently in July was found on a website called fileman. The same exif data came out in this image as well. Around the same time, ahenobarbus henocied images and Futaba meme images were found on this website, which also had the same resolution data as JTK. We need to find that 'website'.

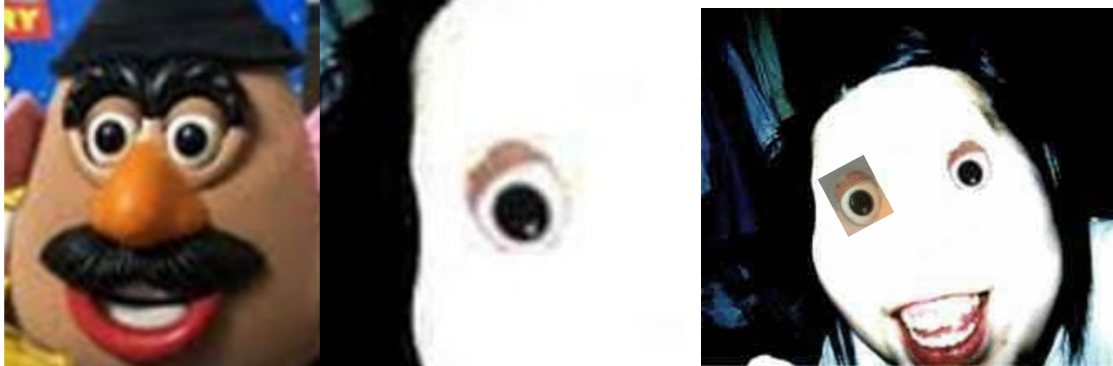

(The original image of ahenobarbus henocied was also recently discovered in Futaba.)

From these eyewitness reports, the image could have come from a webcam site. Some websites we suspect are:

Possible origin of edited eyes

The eyes of JTK1 (oldest record found on July 24, 2005) resembles the eyes of a Mr. Potato Head toy from 1999, more specifically “Toy Story 2 Remote Talking Mr. Potato Head PlaySkool Hasbro 1999”. A gif showing the similarity between an arbitrary potato head eye and JTK is shown below as a demonstration.

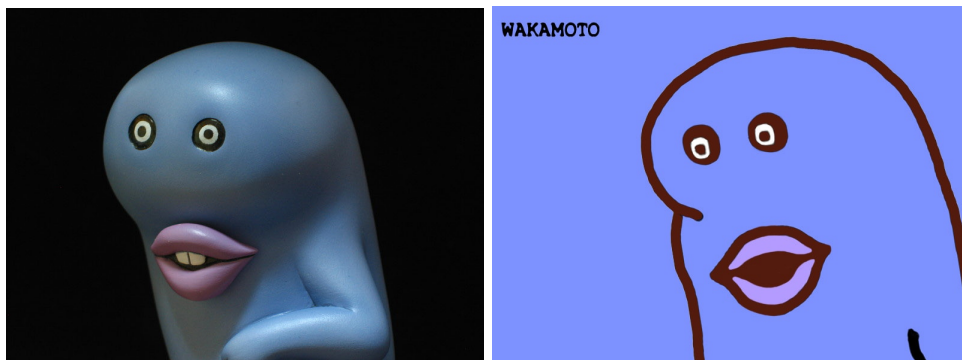

While JTK2 was made on top of the first edit, the only changes being the mouth and eyes.

* (JTK 2) The eyes in this version were painted in, while the mouth stretched.

The eyes also could have originated from CV若本 which is a Futaba meme.

Mole/mouth

It is believed that the mouth belongs to the photo, that is, it is not of a different person/picture, as it fits perfectly with the face and there are no clear signs that it was placed there.

A mole near the mouth is also notable, but it is not known for sure if it is really a mole.

The hair does not appear to have undergone any changes, although it appears very dark.

Image forensic analysis

~ℓ from the Discord search server wrote up a digital image forensic analysis and where the image might have possibly originated from:

"Alright. So I want to start by saying by no means I'm a professional at digital image forensics. There are people out there who can most definitely do a deeper analysis on these images. I'll be covering the most useful findings:
JPEG fingerprinting and Metadata.

-----INTRO-----

So in 2020 I decided to take a forensic approach in analyzing Jeff The Killer's image. The images are used are sourced from Pya.cc and are both the prettyFACE variant and the Jeff variant.

An interesting aspect from the images found in Pya.cc is that the metadata for these are intact. Which is the reason why we can see user comments, software used and the layer name (prettyFACE).

Let's analyze the JPEG artifacts found in prettyFACE. If you don't know, in the world of digital image forensics, A JPEG's compression artifacts are very important because it can be used as a form for detecting various kinds of image tampering and can be analyzed even if the image was compressed twice. I'll show you my analysis of these artifacts and what they can reveal to us.

Let's look at prettyFACE's resolution, although it is a very low quality image, it's at 640x548. There are very visible signs that it was a smaller image scaled to a bigger size, but how can we confirm this, and most importantly:
What is the original resolution?

The process is simple: In JPEG encoding, a given image is divided into non-overlapping blocks of size 8x8 pixels. This is because the way JPEG compression works is that it uses a transformation technique called "Discrete cosine transform" that compresses data in sets of discrete DCT blocks, usually 8x8. Every time a compressed JPEG image is encoded, it will contain a DCT grid, even if on top of an already existing DCT grid.

Because these blocks are very hard to observe with the naked eye, we can do a Principal Component Analysis of the image.

<https://i.imgur.com/Ugz08wm.png>

In the middle of Jeff's face, we see squares that are exactly 21x21. Using simple maths, we find out that the image was resized 2.625 its size, and that its original size is in fact 244x209 when rounded. This is what happens when we resize the picture.

<https://i.imgur.com/OMbNpZF.png>

If one has an excellent eye, they can also notice that the image itself has 8x8 grids, which means it was recompressed to JPEG. (<https://i.imgur.com/xBE6HjL.png>, highlighted: <https://i.imgur.com/Rr6JuXm.png>)

But wait, if you were to look at the clothes on the left, you can see even bigger squares, and indeed they are 40x40 blocks. It is still fairly hard to perceive the blocks, so in here I have highlighted them in red. (<https://i.imgur.com/ZtHtMDt.png>)

These blocks are 40x40, so here is what happens if we resize them to its original size, <https://i.imgur.com/eZBOhic.png>. So let's look all of these into a timeline:

The original image first started out as a very small 130x111 picture. It was then resized and compressed (2.625x) into 244x209 and then upscaled (around 5x the original) its size at 640x548 and compressed again.

At 244x209 and resized with a rather unusual decimal number, we have a very important clue: 244x209 fits very closely into what is the max horizontal length of a thumbnail (250px) of a futaba post. The metadata shows us that the image was created by gd-jpeg v1.0 (using IJG JPEG V62).

gd-jpeg is simply the image processing from libgd, which is used in web for PHP and as futaba's way of compressing thumbnails automatically. Save any futaba thumbnail and check for its metadata, you will see the exact same user comment. (<https://i.imgur.com/j5Hf5Vl.png>)

This directly proves that the earliest variant of this image came from futaba or a similar site, the same thumbnail aspect ratio and gd-jpeg version can also be found in any 4chan thumb. This metadata doesn't prove that this image is from a specific image board, but at least, it proves that this image came from an image board similar to futaba or 4chan.

The second variant of Jeff shows that the modifications were done on top of blown up compressed thumbnails, as the actual modifications themselves are higher quality.

<https://i.imgur.com/c5WfXRI.png> you can even see the brush strokes and the liquify strokes (This means that the eyes were not cut out from anywhere else, but rather drawn in).

-----CONCLUSION-----

I strongly believe there is strong evidence that the true Jeff the Killer came from an image board thread with a similar encoding process of Futaba or 4chan. And that the only way to find the original picture is if someone, somewhere, saved the first image from the thread where this all started.

Another thing to point out is that it seems like Futaba and 4chan use the same image encoding process.

The original image was a heavily compressed small thumbnail as of which was later blown up about 300% into the image we see now.

Another thing said by ~ℓ is that the mouth is likely part of the original image because it has about the same level of detail and noise on all RGB channels as the rest of the image and has proper shadows around the cheek (which the rest of the image unfortunately clipped).

Here are a couple of things made by him that help explain more in detail about the forensics of the edits:

Forensic analysis spreadsheet:

<https://docs.google.com/spreadsheets/d/195zJuTR4sigp2HQ6PCe71cbG0uNaiei9J16m3hfW2dw/edit?usp=sharing>

Regarding size, the thumbnail is roughly 251 x 215 [251:215 (1.17)]

Futaba thumbnails lower the src width by one pixel, so in reality it's: 252 x 215 [252:215 (1.17)].

Closest aspect ratios:

VCD

352x240 - 281x240 Diff: 71

352x288 - 337x288 Diff: 15

SVCD

480x480 - 562x480 Diff: 82

480x576 - 675x576 Diff: 195

ASF/SMR/nAVI/RM

320x240 - 281x240 Diff: 39

Webcams in 2005 had either 640x480 video or 320x240.

320x240 - 281x240 Diff: 39

640x480 - 562x480 Diff: 78

It is very likely the original image was intended to be 320x240.

By assuming the 1px horizontal part of the bar is not part of the image and applying the thumbnail 1px difference, we can anchor the image to the bottom center part of the image, and get an estimate of roughly what is probably the actual size.

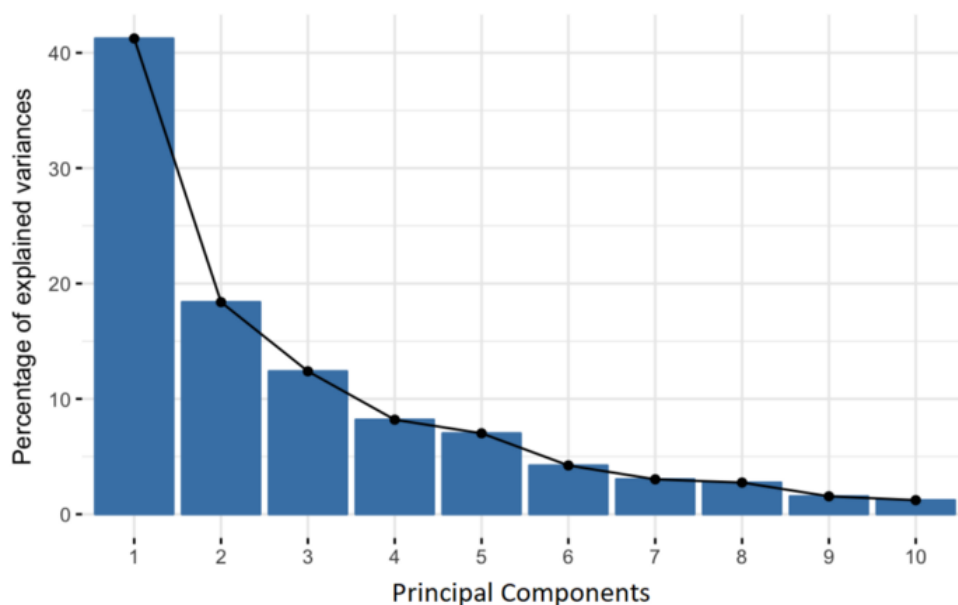

Here is a recreation of the original size, using content-aware fill:

From this, we can see that the framing of the picture is much more natural and akin to that of a mounted webcam.

What is a PCA analysis?

The idea behind a PCA analysis is "reducing dimension", what this means is that we reduce the dimension of the information while still maintaining the variance the information has, as the principal components go up, the less variance the data actually has and the less the information displayed has correlation with the overall picture. We can use this along with an equalized histogram to enhance all the JPEG artifacts that are otherwise very hard to notice to the naked eye.

PC3 is where any signs of image compression should be very obvious, and in this case for the pya.cc JTK2 image, it's completely smooth and free from any 8x8 DCT artefacts.

From this alone, we can notice two things:

- There are huge squares in the background. These are in fact JPEG artefacts from the original image, specifically the ones from the chrominance channel, blown to 3x its original size (16x16, as opposed to the luminance channel, which is 8x8).
- The face and eye portions are completely smooth, with absolutely no DCT artefacts. From metadata and the quantization tables, this also means the image was saved at almost 100% quality (roughly around 98%, quality 11/12).

In the original thumbnail image, the last bottom row of the DCT grid is cut short. This is particularly noticeable on the chrominance channel, where instead of 16x16, it's 16x7. What happens here is that during the process of the transformation, the edge pixels of the top neighbour are repeated. (Because it's missing half of the information it needs to get a better averaging of the pixels.)

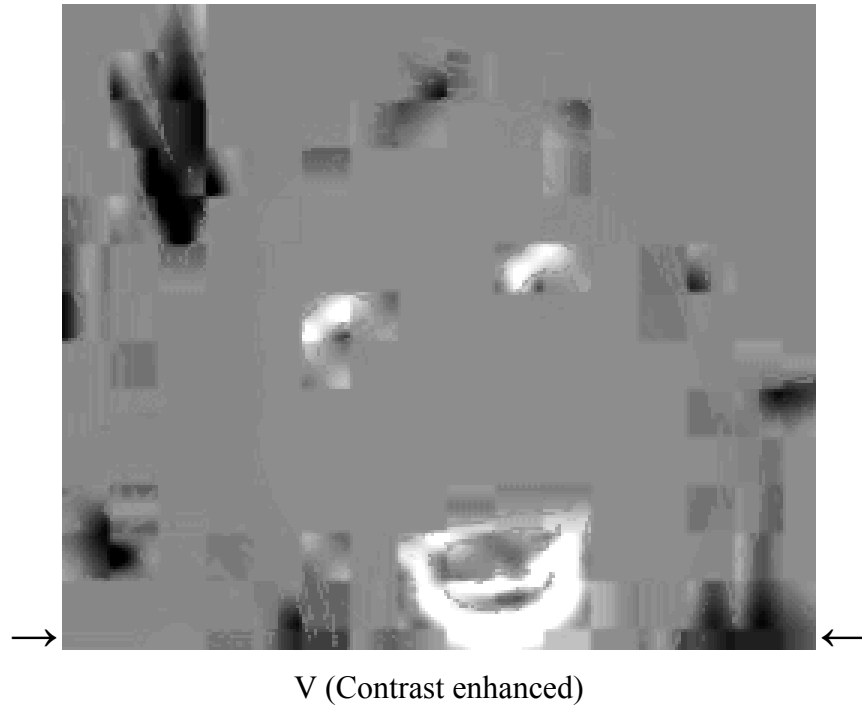

And because there is not much information, it sort of creates a "gradient" which is more noticeable once you upscale it to 3x. As is the case of most Jeff pictures. Because JPEG converts an RGB to YUV image, all we have to do is check the UV Chrominance channels to see this:

Y (Luminance) U (Blue Chrominance) V (Red Chrominance)

U (Contrast enhanced)

From this, we can see that the "wrapping pixel" artifact is merely the result of the averaging process in JPEG compression. Specifically, at the bottom part of the chrominance channel repeating the pixels on top (due to a lack of information on the macro block missing half of its needed height content).

We can also observe the ringing effect of the 1px white horizontal line, which is commonly seen in compressed crops of things typically contained in a window frame. (comment from editor: “a 1px white/black line is also caused when cropping a picture with old photoshop versions such 3.0/4.0”, and that was the photoshop version used in the JTK edits)

Resolution & Bytes for image boards

This is useful when searching for a specific image size and dimension. The way the sites have the codes indexed are different as code changes over time for some of them (2000-2006), and different image boards on the same domain sometimes have different coding in terms of width and height because placement and embedding can change due to multiple factors; therefore there are sometimes multiple ways to type it out when searching the same domain.

Replace 1's with resolution, bytes or KB.

Unconfirmed Theories

Mariko/Suza

Possibly the most convincing lead that has been discovered thus far would have to be the Mariko lead. On April 28, 2023, “eatrawskin” discovered a woman on Japanese imageboard gazo-box.com that went by the name of Mariko. The facial similarities between the subject of the White Powder edits and the newly discovered lead, such as the hairline and mouth, were quite intriguing as they were unparalleled compared to previous ones that have been discovered. Multiple key points of interest were her reputation as a “net-idol” and consistent harassment from multiple people, which are recurring themes in previous finds. All of this information is stemmed from an exhaustive two month search conducted by her search team, which are credited in the last paragraph of this section.

The earliest documented mention of Mariko on the World Wide Web dates back to April 14, 2004, on a Futaba thread. Images and videos of her were documented on an Infoseek page operated by her “boyfriend”, Suzakumaru (who also had multiple pages about himself), that acted as a “diet diary” of Mariko attempting to lose weight. Suzakumaru promoted URLs to it on various websites. The peak of harassment guided towards her was between a three day period on May 20-22. Multiple threads on 5ch and bbspink referred to her as “the net-idol who would surpass Sonoko and Terumi”. Later on, a consensus was established between members on multiple imageboards accusing Suzakumaru of having an unstable relationship with Mariko, due to how he posted his pictures of her. It is unclear whether or not that Mariko consented to the creation of the Infoseek page (it has also been theorized that Suzakumaru was attempting to generate profit off the traffic that came from the onslaught of people discovering her).

An attempt to erase Marikos presence on the Web and Suzakumaru also happened around May 20th of the same year (the majority of the snapshots on the Wayback Machine related to her come from the immediate aftermath) due to the overwhelming negative reception it had garnered as a result of the manner in how the images/videos were posed, with additional captions attached to multiple of them adding fuel to the fire, with some even describing the situation as a “human rights violation”, asking other people to report the page, despite claims of Mariko expressing approval with it. Due to the high profile of reposts, it has been theorized that a witness of them saved at least some of the content created by Suzakumaru, and later modified one of them (or possibly by Suzakumaru himself) into the well known White Powder edits that in turn was known by Western audiences as the image that accompanied the infamous Jeff The Killer creepypasta. A fourteen month gap exists between the shutdown of the page and the earliest known instance of JTK1 appearing (May 2004 - July 2005).

The general idea between the investigation members was that the image used for the White Powder edits was taken after May 2004 from a (possibly unarchived) video recorded by Suzakumaru about Mariko, especially since there are at least three video of her, with two being considered “disturbing” due to the way she looked in them. The possible reason why material of her is hard to come by was because of a rare instance of 5ch users coming together and protesting the acts done toward her and thus making them not archived.

The lead is also supported by the fact that Suzakumaru is proficient with Photoshop (version 5.1, to be exact) and has made edits of himself related to the paranormal, something akin to the images that we are all familiar with.

Examples of these images (with comparisons between the known edit) are:

(JTK Mouth overlay example/hairline similarities, face shape overlay)

An image of Suzakumaru seen in a room can be compared to the White Powder edits due to the positioning of the closet and shoes (image edited by the subject himself that also shows his interest in the paranormal).

Further information is present in a dedicated document such as the thread links containing mentions of Mariko, more images of the duo and keywords related to the incidents (the status of it is currently unfinished and will be updated as more information comes along) managed by a subsection of the investigation team responsible for discovering the lead (consisting of “Prime”, “Lifted”, “Milk” and “Eatrawskin”):

White powder link from 2004

On 1 February 2023, a link on pya.cc with “(18+) White powder (Information: Dakimakura-sama)” was found, and is a potential contender for the earliest instance of the JTK image so far. The post date is 3 February 2004, more than 1 year from the earliest known occurrence of the image showing up on the internet. Unfortunately, the whole thing is not archived and that means that we are not able to see what the post contained.

Haduri

Haduri is a webcam site that contains an image that seems to be close to the JTK image.

Their username is kojzzang0617 (the image is blurry because of its original resolution, also because it's a thumbnail)

Note: This is the preview of the person's profile, the image could have been screenshotted from a video session.

We have attempted to contact somebody who is allegedly the same person in this photo, to no response. Please don't attempt to contact this person.

THERE IS NO PROOF THAT THIS IS THE UNEDITED IMAGE. THIS IS SELECTED BECAUSE IT LOOKS CLOSE.

Also, the Reddit eyewitness report points to a cam site, but we can't prove that the person seen was the one in the JTK image.

Natchi

Also, the Reddit eyewitness report points to a cam site, but we can't prove that the person seen was the one in the JTK image. Natchi (なっち) was the title for a post on fileman on July 11th, 2005 (3 days before the earliest jtk). Only the preview was archived, leaving the full post a mystery. One month later in August, however, there was a comment saying "Natchi?" on the gazo05 repost page. The name Natchi is generally a cute nickname for girls whose name starts with Natsu, like Natsumi or Natsuko. At the time, the nickname was most popularly used on the internet for Abe Natsumi who was an idol. There is no more information about this image.

Koge donbo

Koge donbo is a manga artist that became popular in the late 90s. She is known for hiding her face, but there are a couple of images of it out there. Some comments on Japanese threads and videos also have compared her to the image. The one above spread on a lot of 2ch threads in the early 2000s. An interview on this show <https://www.nicovideo.jp/watch/sm4989744> with the clip showing at 10:15.

Someone also mentioned her on a comment on the つぶろ's video

Also, on comment 109 on <https://fox.5ch.net/test/read.cgi/poverty/1409227917>, a user says something along the lines of "I thought it was the image where Koge donbo's face picture was edited to look like a white Oba-Q type face." Presumably they are comparing one of the images from the thread to JTK

Another old picture of her

Sonoko Tsukagoshi was a popular net idol from approximately 2000-2007, with websites that spiked in popularity around 2005. Sonoko has uploaded hundreds of images, gifs, and videos of herself across multiple websites. Due to her physical appearance and brief meme status across 2chan threads (mostly for the purpose to harass her) it is believed she could be a possible identity.

Japanese Webcam Site

One of the theories for the origins of the Jeff The Killer picture is that, according to /b/ old fags, it was originally an "ugly as a sin" camgirl from a japanese webcam site like Stickam in 2005 that had her picture of her webcam taken during a streaming session and a photoshop battle thread created to mock her. She was also mocked for having a very strong webcam flash on her face, so the brightness on her face was exaggerated for comical/scare effect.

This theory has a very strong base supported by multiple facts:

1. The original image resolution corroborates to that of Futaba's thumbnails.
2. The second variant of Jeff's image is drawn on top of the low resolution but upscaled image, typical of "photoshop battles" type threads
3. The original resolution is tiny, such size is typical of mid 2000s webcam sites.
4. The very clipped highlights and shadows suggest that Photoshop's legacy Brightness/Contrast tool was used to ramp up the contrast.
5. If one were to analyze the bottom horizontal line of the picture, they'll find it's the exact same line found in screen captures of Stickam webcam windows. (NSFW proof: <https://imgur.com/a/3Efjt8R>)

Debunked Rumours

To get everything out of the way first, the Katy Robinson rumour is false, she is not the person in the original image. The rumour comes from 2008. We found Katy Robinson on a Christian forum: <https://web.archive.org/web/20061122165849/http://www.truechristian.com/favoa.html> .

Katy Robinson's real name is Heather White. In 2019, Heather was interviewed by user Gage. In this interview, Heather confirms that the story is fake, here is the link to the interview: <http://web.archive.org/web/20191002223047/https://pastebin.com/A4kwc5Kp>

This image is not the least photoshopped edit. Source here: <https://www.deviantart.com/reed82/art/81408-Jeff-the-killer2-351856947>

There was a rumour about a third JTK image which depicted Jeff next to a dirty bathtub holding a piece of flesh, and that he had long fingers. This rumour is most likely false, because there is no evidence about this image existence and an anon on 4chan admitted to have created this rumour:

<http://web.archive.org/web/20220210233156/https://archive.4plebs.org/x/thread/13132950/>

There are many fake edits floating around the internet claiming to be the original image, but most of them are just mock-ups created on the discord server or images that we found on discord. If you found an image, and you are not sure if it's fake or not, don't spread it, join our discord and ask if it was debunked.
