Who chooses the host city for the future Olympics?

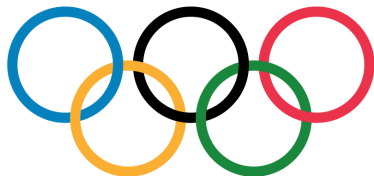

The decision for where the future Olympic games will take place is decided by the members of the IOC (International Olympic Committee). The host city is elected by a majority of the votes cast by a secret ballot. Each active member of the IOC has only one vote. A member of the IOC is not allowed to vote when the vote concerns the selection of a city in the country that the person resides.

Who can apply to host the Olympic games?

In the first stage of the selection process any city in the world is able to submit an application to become a host city. After approximately 10 months the Executive Board of the IOC decides which applicant cities will become official candidates based on the recommendation of a working group that reviews all of the applications.
