

This piece is a tree with leaves of rainbows. I was looking for inspiration on google and saw something like it. I thought it was cool and decided to recreate it differently. I hope this will show how not everything is black and white or that not everything is what we expect and that isn't always a bad thing. I dealt with one problem. The water color pens I was using weren't blending as well as I hoped they would. I was really proud of myself when I finished it. I noticed how thick water color paper is and how hard it is to create a drawing of a tree. Also that it is pretty hard to blend water color when it's from a marker.
