From Jes Craven's Chop Wood, Carry Water Substack
Background:	The “Good Trouble Lives On” national day of action honored the late congressman and civil rights leader John Lewis. More than 1,600 peaceful protests were held along streets, at courthouses, and other public spaces across the nation. READ about it. The current administration has been ordered to restore $6.2 million in grant funding to nine LGBTQ+ and HIV-related nonprofits. READ about it. Andry Hernández Romero, a gay makeup artist who sought asylum in the U.S. due to persecution in Venezuela because he is gay, but was deported to a prison in El Salvador, has been released as part of a prisoner swap. He was sent to Venezuela and has not returned here, so he is not out of the woods yet. But it's a start. READ about it. Read more good news HERE.
