

Sarah Schwager

My name is Sarah Schwager and I am the Program Lead for the King of Prussia chapter of Project Healing Waters. PHW is a national non-profit organization, started in 2005, serving veterans in need through fly fishing. I was introduced to this organization by a colleague who stumbled across the organization while visiting colleges with his daughter. We decided to pursue having our employer become the first corporate sponsor of the organization. For more than five years we have been leading a chapter based out of our office at CSL Behring with headquarters in King of Prussia PA. I have always had a love for fly fishing, instilled in me by my father as a young child. In my first career as a clinical social worker I worked with individuals who experienced trauma, as a certified trauma therapist. I was excited to bring together my love for fly fishing with my clinical knowledge and skills and desire to help others heal by leading a chapter for PHW. I currently still work for CSL Behring as a hematology clinical scientist. We work to bring novel therapies to individuals with rare diseases. In my free time I enjoy fishing, hiking, spending time at my cabin in Maine, working in animal rescue, working with my certified therapy dog and caring for my personal 3 dogs and cat. I also enjoy doing home/yard renovations at my home in Downingtown, PA.
