Post-FCJ comment: We lost, but the boys looked promising. ¡Verde!			Pre-STL comment: On Moontower this week, Sonny Guadarrama argued that Wolff peré would start his son on the left wing tonight. Sonny's logic is impeccable: young Wolff has a lot of recent minutes and is fit; Rigoni, on the other hand is just back from an extended injury and will need to be worked back into the lineup gradually. It all makes perfect sense, so I list young Wolff second on the left wing on my org chart this week. But I'm afraid I don't quite have the courage to list Wolff first there.	So now we'll see, lol! Post-VAN comment: Vancouver's a tough place to play, etc. etc. I wonder if Ring is on his way out the door now? Of his groin, Wolff said they'll play it by ear over the next couple of weeks. Rigoni came out with a hurt knee. We'll see how badly. Driussi came out nursing a hamstring, Valencia with cramping. ¡Verde!			Pre-SKC comment: I'm guessing that Lima gets the nod at centerback Saturday. ATX2-SKC1 ¡Listos!

Post-MIN comment: We had a poor start, but they were offside a lot. And our goals were lovely. Pereira reset his yellow card accumulation by collecting a suspension against Vancouver, a trip he presumably can't make anyway due to visa issues. Ring was out with his groin injury again; Craig was on the bench. ¡Verde!			Pre-VAN comment: A win (which is unlikely) would (amazingly!) put us back on track with my preseason expectations! But it won't be easy.	It's our longest road trip of the year, in the middle of a three game week, with Pereira suspended and Ring still on the injury list, and on artificial turf that Driussi would prefer to avoid. So, let's project a draw and hope for better: ATX1-VAN1 ¡Listos!

Post-HOU comment: Tres a cero, back to back! We're now up to 1.3 ppg, with Ring still out injured, and Rado playing hurt in his last game with us. We need another centerback. Even with another centerback our back line looks too thin to sustain this sudden upturn of fortune. And with aging Finlay starting at right wing, our front line isn't as thick as we'd like either. Nor, for that matter, our midfield. But, tres a cero, back to back! Hope springs! ¡Verde!			Pre-MIA comment: ATX2-MIA1 ¡Listos!

Post-DAL comment: A thrashing again, lol. The first time this year that we scored 3 goals. ¡Verde!			Pre-HOU comment: Houston is 4th in the West on the table, but on 538's SPI list, they rank only 9th in the West. Moreover, 538's model give us a 51% chance to win this one. We can do it! ATX2-HOU1 ¡Listos! Ring is still on the injury list,but Djeffal is not. So I assume Djeffal should make the gameday roster today.	Wolff may need to do some rotation, but I wouldn't expect a lot. We'll have a full week to rest after this one. So, we had a good game against a shorthanded Dallas squad. Can we do it again against Houston? That would be nice! ¡Verde!

Post-MIN comment: Ironman Ring recovered sufficiently from his Saturday groin pull to put in a yeomanlike first half, fully recovered Cascante earned assists on both of our goals, and Driussi, in his first minutes on the field since his groin pull, put in the winning goal. And Stuuuuuver.... Six saves! ¡Verde!	Notable: Wolff employed three center backs with Zardes, Fagundez, and Finlay; but switched back to two with Urruti, Driussi, and Rigoni? Post-HOU comment: Ring went out with a groin pull, our fourth groin pull of the year (Cascante, Fagundez, and Driussi being the other three). Zardes scored in a third straight league match — all headers — bringing him to the 100-MLS-goal mark. Still our offensive woes (as well as our injury woes) continue, alas. ¡Verde!			Pre-MIN comment: Our back line is looking pretty thin now. But Ring, thank heavens, is available. Nonetheless: ATX2-MIN1 ¡Listos! Note: Pereira is one yellow away from suspension.

Post-SJE comment: Wolff shook up the starting lineup and, lo and behold, a couple of goals fell out. Not enough goals to win at home, to be sure. But enough to engender hope in the hearts of the faithful. Redes on the right wing and Rigoni on the left looks like natural positions for both. And Redes, at least, shows signs of finally beginning to earn his high salary.		¡Verde!	Pre-POR comment: ATX1-POR1 ¡Listos!

Post-LAFC comment: Austin played well, but still didn't generate anything in the final third. LAFC played well and... ...cowa-Bounga! The scoreline was much more lopsided than the match. But it was still LA's game, no question. It's not that Austin is doing all that badly or anything. Had we beaten St Louis (which we should have!), we'd be right on track with preseason expectations, points-wise. But, obviously, six goals in six games is a concern.	At this point, I'm naturally tempted to lash out and blame it all on... ...the guy I've had misgivings about, lol. Others may naturally be tempted to blame it all on their favorite culprit. But Austin played well, I thought, against a truly fine squad. They just need to continue to work on figuring out their final-third challenge.	I know they're working hard on it. They've got time. But they will have to figure it out if they're to have a successful season this year. ¡Verde! Notable: According to WhoScored, 26% of Austin's goals last year came from set pieces. In contrast, none of our goals so far this year have come from set pieces.	Pre-VAN comment: We tried Urruti over Zardes against LAFC, to little effect. Maybe this week, Wolff will be ready to bench Rigoni in favor of Finlay? We'll see. Austin and Vancouver are very evenly matched just now. And we've got 'em at home. 538 gives us a 47% chance to win. So, we'll see about that, too. ATX2-VAN1 ¡Listos!	With Kolmanić now out for the season, I expect Gallagher to return to the left side.

Post-COL comment: After four regular season games we were running 14% behind my preseason accumulated points expectation. I concluded that we were off to a mediocre start. After five games, we're running 22% behind. And for all the (understandable!) concern about our thin back line, it's our offense that is faring marginally worse than our defense. In three of our five games, we've held our opponent to one goal or none. But in only two of the five have we	managed to put two goals in the back of the net ourselves. We currently stand fourth in the West for goals allowed per 90, but only fifth in goals scored per 90. Well, I'm sure the team is working hard on it. And now they have two full weeks to work hard on it, before our next game. A game against LAFC. In LA. ¡Verde! Notable: 1. Only 19 players suited up Saturday. Tarek failed to suit up for either the Friday night	or the Saturday night game. It appears that after Wolff brings Keller back to the first team, then Tarek will get his chance to play for the second squad and begin his own rehabilitation. 2. Pereira's late yellow was an utter waste. A holding mid needs to save those for tactical necessities, not squander them on late game frustrations. Pereira still has some growing up to do.	Pre- LAFC comment: The preferred starting 11 that emerged over the course of the first five games has failed to generate as much offense as we would expect from this squad. So, after two weeks' rest, it will be interesting to see if Wolff starts anyone different.	LAFC on the road ain't gonna be easy. 538's expectations, for example, are brutal: They give us a 67% chance of losing. But, let's hope we can bring home one point, at least: ATX1-LAFC1 ¡Listos!

1. Cascante went out 11 minutes into our first game, and didn't return to the pitch until our 11th

2. Keller came in for Cascante, screwed up epically, and was banished from the gameday squad until the eighth game. He next saw a first team pitch in our 18th game.
3. Väisänen and young Wolff missed our fifth game for international duty.

Post-HOU comment: Well, shoot. The formula for winning in MLS is simple enough: score two or more goals while holding your opponent to one or none. In our first four games of this season, we have managed to achieve both of these simple objectives in a game only once: the inspiring road victory in Utah. Once we failed to achieve either: this flacid performance in Houston. The three points squandered against St Louis loom rather larger now.	Houston, I thought, earned their victory. We, alas, failed to deserve better than our defeat. We now have a week to rest and recover, before hosting Colorado at McKalla. With Väisänen off to Europe next week for international duty, the Colorado match could be an interesting one. ¡Verde! Notable: Both Tarek and Keller again failed to make the gameday roster.		Pre- COL comment: We shouldn't really have too much trouble beating the so-far hapless Rapids at McCalla. But, with both Väisänen and Wolff off to Europe for international duty, there are questions. The big one is who will start at centerback with Ring. https://open.substack.com/pub/atxsoccer/p/pre-col-comment?r=110jp&utm_campaign=post&utm_medium=web ATX2-COL1 ¡Listos!

Post-VIO2 comment: The boys played hard. The boys played, I thought, well (albeit against weak competition). Not, alas, well enough to advance past the long-delayed and yet still uncalled penalty. Not, of course, well enough to satisfy all of our boo-birds. But nonetheless well enough to encourage a glass-half-full sort like me. We started our best available eleven and we pounded 'em. Here's the encouragement I took: 1. I felt that the effort redeemed our honor after the embarrassing loss down in Hispañola. 2. The embarrassing loss, of course, remains. I	in the months and years to come. 3. The hard-fought contest provides a significant amount of additional game film and data as Wolff and company work to build a winning 2023 version of Team Verde. ¡Listos! Other notes of interest: 1. Although both Bersano and Las made the expanded gameday roster, neither Tarek nor Keller did. 2. Rigoni earned his first goal contribution. 3. Lundkvist again earned significant minutes. I would not be at all surprised to see him soon become our regular starter at left back. 4. Violette caught some breaks, sure. But hey, they could use a break, couldn't they? I, for my part, can't begrudge them their good	fortune. And I thought they played well in both legs of their difficult task. We, alas, only played well in one.	Pre- HOU comment: One of my (many?) pet theories is that, as a rule, ownership is much more important to the success of an MLS franchise than the head coach. And I'm high on Dynamo owner, Ted Segal. True, Segal hasn't yet produced a winner in Houston. And he lacks a track record as a successful sports franchise owner. So, time will tell whether or not my confidence in Segal's stewardship is well placed. But he appears to me to be committed to the Houston project, and to be doing what is necessary to reverse the long-suffering fortunes of the club. I believe that he will be successful. But like St Augustine, I pray, lol, "Not yet!"	Currently, Houston looks terrible. The chance that they will quit looking terrible in the near future depends, I think, upon the development of new acquisition Amine Bassi. If Austin can manage Bassi, they may well steal three points in Houston. But, the Verde-boys have been running pretty hard lately. And they haven't yet entirely succeeded in integrating their own new acquisitions into their revamped attack. So, I'll cautiously project only a draw for this weekend's road game: ATX1-HOU1 And I'll hope for better. ¡Verde!

Post-RSL comment: Three games into the 2023 season, Austin FC's six points exactly matches my preseason expectation. The boys have done it the hard way, squandering three against St Louis at home, but then stealing three last night against RSL up in the high country. Sometimes that's the way the ball bounces. Gallagher had a man-of-the match performance. The much-maligned young Wolff assisted on Gallagher's goal, and then punched in the winning goal himself. Neither Ring nor Väisänen were perfect. But both looked strong holding RSL's perduring pressure to one goal on the opponent's high home	field. I continue to feel very good about our starting centerbacks. Those inclined to take a glass-half-full view of the 2023 edition of Verde can point to the zero goals or assists from Zardes and Rigoni . However, both continue to create chances. I think we can reasonably expect the goals to come. I thought Zardes looked especially strong against Salt Lake. Looking ahead, my pre-season benchmark looks for 13 points from Austin's first 8 regular season games. The conventional way to earn their next seven points would be to bring home a result from Houston on Saturday, and to then beat Colorado and Vancouver at McKalla later in the Spring. Or, they might continue to do things the hard way.	Unlike 2022, Austin hasn't exactly shot out of the gate this year. But they're back on track. ¡Verde! Other notes: 1. Starting Finlay over the much-worked Fagundez was an obvious choice that I should have anticipated. Still, I was surprised to see Finlay start on the left. I would have expected Rigoni to move to the left side and Finlay start on his usual right wing. Still, Finlay looked just fine on the left. And I can see the wisdom of leaving the still-acclimating Rigoni in his accustomed right wing slot. I've adjusted my depth chart accordingly.	see that neither Tarek nor Keller made the game day squad in Sandy. That left us with Lima or Lundkvist as potential backups at centerback. Maybe we'll see Tarek and/or Keller take the pitch against Violette and/or Houston in the coming week? 3. Redes did make the gameday roster in Sandy. In my impatience with Redes , I had moved him below Ocampo. That was silly of me. I've moved Redes back up a notch. We may yet see development from that U22 signing, lol. ¡Listos!	Pre- VIO2 comment: For the first leg, I projected a maximum rotation. I didn't expect Wolff to rotate as heavily as I projected, and he didn't. But with no basis for predicting what the actual lineup might be, I thought that projecting a maximum rotation might be a useful exercise. I don't have any basis on which to predict the lineup for the second leg, either. I think this time, then, I'll just project what I believe to be our strongest 20. Again, I don't expect Wolff to actually field this lineup. But again, I think it might be a useful exercise. As for a projected score... ATX3(3)P-VIO0(1) ¡Listos!

Post-VIO comment: It is, of course, embarrassing to get shellacked 3-0 by a beleaguered Caribbean side in a team's maiden foray into international competition. Welcome to CONCACAF, lol. More concerning (to me, at least) than the shellacking was Amro Tarek's weak showing. Tarek may come along in time. But he certainly isn't there yet. And then he got injured. We need a solid third centerback. Right now, it looks like young Kippy is our number three.	So, depth remains a concern; especially defensive depth. On the other hand.... Lundkvist got a 90 minute runout, and I've seen no complaints. That's promising. And Landon Cotham was positively glowing regarding Djeffal's 82 minutes: https://www.moontowersoccer.com/cf-montreal-recap-diaster-in-ccl-zardesurruti-debate-rsl-preview-w-keith-cosigan-and-more/ So, defensive depth remains a concern. But there's also promise. Promise despite an embarrassing shellacking.	Up top, Rodney Redes didn't inspire. What else is new. Rigoni failed to save the day. Ditto. Overall, the team looked unprepared for a CCL first leg. Under the circumstances, that may be all she wrote this year. But I think we can expect better preparation when a CCL first leg opportunity again presents itself in the years to come. The good news is that against Montreal we found both our post-Cascante centerback pair and three points; and that pair, furthermore, (among other players) will be rested and ready	Concerns remain. But there are always concerns. And embarrassment. Welcome to CONCACAF. ¡Verde!	Pre- RSL comment: Austin should be the stronger squad. But, we'll be playing 'em on a short turnaround up in the high country. So, let's project a draw and hope for better. ATX1-RSL1 ¡Listos! We should be able to start our strongest eleven. A strain on Fagundez, maybe, but otherwise fine, I think.

Valencia didn't look too hot, either.	And Keller didn't look bad coming in off of the bench.	to face RSL at altitude on Saturday.

Post-MTL comment: Our centerback search is Finnished: Ring looked great. Finishing at the other end of the pitch, on the other hand, left something to be desired. But, chance creation improved markedly from game #1. I subscribe to the theory that if you create chances, goals will follow. I was reassured by the improvement I saw in our offense.	Also noted: 1. Tarek and Lundkvist made the game day roster; and Lundkvist saw a minute of the pitch just before the final whistle. 2. The flexible and impressive Gallagher started at right back, but also earned an assist after moving up to left wing late in the game. 3. With our backline so ably reinforced, attention now turns to our depleted midfield: Where's Djeffal? ¡Verde!		Pre- VIO comment: I think it's reasonable to expect a heavy rotation for this game against what should be weak competition, albeit on a short turnaround and played offshore. ATX3-VIO1 What, exactly, that heavy rotation will look like is impossible to predict. As an exercise, I project a maximum rotation. The CCL allows a 23 man gameday roster. I, however, project only the	usual 9 subs in my maximum rotation exercise. We'll see what it all really looks like on Tuesday. ¡Listos!

Post-STL comment: What a disaster. I felt better after watching Wolff's calming post-game presser. I felt better after moving Ring back up to a starting position on my depth chart. But still.... What a disaster.... Let me count the ways: 1. Cascante out for at least 8 weeks 2. A mysterious difficulty with Ring , of all people 3. Rigoni still appears to be a bust 4. Three points squandered 5. Where's Lundkvist? 6. Two shots on goal	Well, next Saturday we host a relatively strong team at McKalla. We'll see what the boys are made of. ¡Verde!		Pre-MTL comment: Montreal may not be an expansion side. But they are a team in transition. They can be had. Austin, though, will have to resolve its centerback situation and take 'em. ATX2-MTL1 Other questions to be resolved: 1. Is Ring ready to retake his starting role at the 8? 2. Should Gallagher resume his starting role at left fullback? 3. Should Finlay resume his starting role at right wing? Upon reflection, I'd answer	yes, no, and no to those questions. We'll see how Coach Wolff answers on Saturday. ¡Listos!

Post-LAFC comment: Well, a glorious sophomore season comes to an end. The boys fought hard, but were outmanned. And the breaks, alas, went to the favorite, rather than to the underdog. Which, to be sure, is no shame. Widely picked (and by me, too) to finish out of the playoffs in 2022, ATXFC instead consistently exceeded both expectations and their advanced stats to cruise to a very solid second-in-the-West finish. They then confirmed their successful season with a second-in-the-West playoff run. Verde! I'll be surprised if ATX does as well in 2023. But I do think their chances are good of avoiding any return to their very weak	first season form. And sometime in the next five years, I wouldn't be at all surprised to see them playing for the cup. I have a lot of confidence in Precourt's leadership. His are not the deepest ownership pockets in the league. But he does appear to me to be among the more promising franchise operators. I hope for many happy years of ATXFC fandom. Listos!	Pre- STL comment: An expansion side at home? Should be a cakewalk shouldn't it? Well..... It should be. Austin has had difficulty against the gegenpress in the past. The team appears to have addressed this weakness in the preseason though. And STL is an expansion side. So, yeah, cakewalk (I hope!): ATX3-STL1 ATX emerges from the winter break arguably a stronger squad. Clearly stronger in front with Zardes and Bruin in for Hoesen and Djitté. Perhaps stronger in the middle with Djefal	for Martin, and with another year on young Wolff (although Ring is currently a big question mark in the midfield). And stronger in the back, too, if Väisänen pans out. Losing Gabrielsen was a blow, but if Väisänen does the job, the addition of Lundkvist and Tarek, plus another year on young Kippy, should be a clear step forward. If, on the other hand, Väisänen turns out to be a bust, things could get pretty ugly for us this year A third preseason, and another year of experience for Wolff père , should help. As should swapping Nashville for STL. But I don't think we can count on last year's injury luck holding. Or last year's goals over xG. Or last year's weak performances from Seattle, Portland, and SKC. And Rigoni is a big	question mark up front. Not to mention Redes. And an awful lot hinges on Driussi. Sam Jones tells us that if ATXFC had matched goals and goals allowed to its xG and xG allowed last year, they would only have finished 10th in the West. I think we can expect better than 10th this year. But, maybe not 2nd. Let's say 6th on the Western Conference regular season table, and hope for better. Listos! I do anticipate some pretty significant adjustments to the depth chart from last season. But, we'll see how it really shapes up after a few games.
