

Free Photo Websites for Bloggers | No, Mum, I'm Not A Millennial

Are you a blogger struggling to find images to prettify your posts? Good. You're in the right place. Here's my personal list of websites that host photos licensed under Creative Commons Zero, meaning that their photographers have waived all copyright - you can use them for any purpose, including commercial purposes, for free, even when you have edited them. The only stipulation is that credit for both photographer and website is appreciated (though not required) and that you cannot use them to imply the photographer endorses your project.

Here we go:

- <https://unsplash.com/> (my #1 favourite)
- <https://www.pexels.com/>
- <https://pixabay.com/> (probably the widest selection out there)
- <https://barnimages.com/>
- <https://negativespace.co/>
- <https://skitterphoto.com/>
- <http://photos.polarfox.com/>
- <https://gratisography.com/> (this one is great because it's so whimsical)
- <http://startupstockphotos.com/> (these photos are designed for startups, but a lot of the computery ones are great for blogs)
- <https://picjumbo.com/> (this one is great because of its search filters)
- <http://pickupimage.com/>
- <https://deathtothestockphoto.com/> (this one has videos too, apparently? I haven't used it much but that sounds fun)

(Quick note that I found a lot of these websites from PicMonkey's Photo Resources article - they described them in a bit more detail so head over if you'd like to know more.)