

The Manifesto of the Establishment known as DirectCode

Preface

We the people of the establishment known as DirectCode hereby declare this establishment in order to positively benefit open source developers in learning and producing code.

Links

Monthly Budget

Contacting Us

You can find us on IRC on irc.esper.net or irc.freenode.net in #directcode

Core Principles

- Create a productive yet fun and enjoyable environment and culture.
- Joke, but do not hurt.
- Sharing is caring.
- Be open to peer review and quality control from others, and partake in it as well.
- Collaborate, do not isolate.
- Be reasonable.
- Do not be afraid to make something better.
- Do not be afraid to re-create something, just make it better, and make it worthwhile.
- Do not do anything that will get you into big trouble, because sharing is caring, and we would all get the blame.
- Help, do not hurt.
- If you need something, ask. We provide the tools so you can code.
- Do not overload yourself. Keep your path clear.

Tools

DirectCode provides tools to developers so they don't have to mess around with licenses and servers. We even provide a GitHub Issue Tracker for tracking what tools developers want.