Many of our ancient, history-inspired faith practices come from a time where values like kindness and compassion were not as prevalent or valued as they are today. Where does that leave us when the bonds of connection dissolve? This teaching and discussion hopes to provide examples and techniques, both modern and historical, for re-engaging relationships mindfully, with compassion, and without the righteous indignation that can often come with being an adherent to our "ancient" traditions.

This workshop will help you understand how the subconscious mind influences habits, emotional patterns, and beliefs—and why change can sometimes feel difficult, even when there is a strong conscious desire for it. I provide a clear, accessible explanation of how hypnosis works, helping to demystify the process while empowering them with practical insight into their own minds. You will be guided through simple, effective tools such as pattern interrupts and breath-based techniques that support nervous system regulation and create space for new choices in real time. The workshop will also include a workbook, so participants can engage with guided prompts to identify what they are ready to release, shift, or call in. We will conclude with a group hypnosis experience, guiding everyone into a relaxed, receptive state where they can begin to release old patterns and embody new, more aligned ways of thinking, feeling, and responding.

- Grief Circle

@ Lichen Workshop Area

Presenter: Andrea Sipe

Who or what are you grieving? Grief lives in our tissues, in our physical bodies, but we live in a culture that has difficulty fully releasing and expressing these big emotions. When someone or something deeply important and beloved to us is removed from our lives, we need to take the time to adjust and fully grieve that absence, and to honor the broken, empty space it leaves behind. In this ceremony, we will come together to support and hold each other as we acknowledge and release our grief. Please bring a drum (if you have one), a scarf or shawl (for a head cover), a photo or item to place on our altar to honor that which you are grieving, and an open heart.

- Ritual Formulas
