

Male Vocal commission

Vocal reference: Door from hunter the parenting

note: im looking for this specific tone, though not exactly his vocal mannerisms. Not the slow, drawn out speaking of words, not the uncanny relaxed tone to his voice. I will need a bit more energy and more emotion in the aged voice.

The scene

To help you understand the scene to voice it better. Here is a summary, should you be interested in the context.

You are voicing a fantasy adventurer of 160 years of age. You have a life of accomplishment, but also a life of regret, unable to save your friends or family to the dangers of the world, it has made you protective of what little you have of your old life. Now suddenly, after 120 years, your sister reappears. You thought she was dead or gone forever.. she is the Most important thing to you. But she doesn't seem well.. you want to help her, but you also don't want to push her away again. Like the first time.

Lines

(For this starting line, sound sure of yourself, and comforting, but also a little remorseful that you have to tell your sister this.)

"I spoke with Edward and Tenera about this.. it took hours for me to get Tenera in a speaking mood.. I don't fully know what's going on here Tempest... but i know the general situation.. a child you weren't expecting.. a lot of Yelling.."

"Edward said that he will still care for your child.. and that it may be best if you.. leave the kid here, and take some time away from the castle, so they can have time to process this..."

(This line should be reassuring, trying to calmly cheer her up.)

"I have a home in Ico (I-Ko).. near our old family estate. We can live there for some time.. I've worried for you these past 120 years, but to see you ok.. I want you to know I'm here for you sister."

(Sound slightly sad and disappointed, like a parent.)

"Tempest..."

(Sound worried but still caring. Like your watching a parent or sibling fall to insanity, and you don't know how to help them.)

"Tempest your not making any sense! who's they? what a-"

(Sound resigned, and assuring)

"I promise.."
