Fingerless Gloves were initially designed for practicality to protect your hand while exposing your fingers for tasks requiring precision. In the 1980s, the fingerless glove evolved into a stylish, edgier look, providing a way to wear gloves with stylish rings. This look became popular and was worn daily by the late and great Karl Lagerfeld. He made the fingerless glove look like eccentric couture and elevated it from the "working glove." Many fashion icons, such as our partner and collaborator Patricia Field, continue to wear the fingerless glove. Patricia and her love for Fingerless Gloves led to the resurgence of gloves and their popularity because of her recent success in designing the Emily in Paris series. SEYMOURE co-designed and produced these fingerless gloves with Patricia for the series. Next, Patricia Field and SEYMOURE launched our best-selling fingerless gloves - The Emily. Patricia Field x SEYMOURE fingerless gloves are available in many bright colors, while our classic SEYMOURE Fingerless Gloves are sleek and cool

Today's tech-minded generation has combined fingerless gloves with their original purpose (using devices) and fused it with fashion. For those looking for something really unique and special, The SEYMOURE Statement Fingerless Designer Gloves are hand-embellished. Each crystal or stud is individually placed and set by hand, making this style the most elevated to the one-of-a-kind craftsmanship we deliver.

Our fingerless driving gloves are individually handmade, embracing a devotion to a practice of generations now nearly lost. The way our gloves are made is a testament to the artistry and history of a centuries-old accessory. We have kept the process intact while elevating this extraordinary accessory to modern times.

Even our fashion fabrics are thoughtfully sourced, as we exclusively partner with mills that share our commitment to conscious production.

The skilled craftsmanship of SEYMOURE gloves is a testament to our dedication to quality. Each pair is individually table cut by a glove master, ensuring precision and perfection. Before the construction process begins, our sustainably sourced leather undergoes thorough inspection and hand-stretching, guaranteeing that only the finest materials are used. We employ upgraded vintage die-cuts, renowned for their decades-long legacy in creating runway opera gloves, through our partnership with a third-generation, family-owned factory.

Every pair of SEYMOURE gloves is a unique work of art, distinguished by its own identification number. This individual touch reflects the exclusivity and skill that goes into each pair, whether they are made from leather or fabric. Our fabric gloves, too, are table-cut individually, with each artisan investing several hours of skilled work to ensure a product of unmatched quality.

Our artisans are dedicated to one purpose - creating exceptional gloves. This specialization allows us to perfect each style down to the smallest detail. SEYMOURE is more than a brand; it's a symbol of conscious fashion and a commitment to the world we live in.

SEYMOURE Runway Opera gloves are crafted for those who not only care about fashion but also the planet. Experience your individual style with a touch of timeless elegance, knowing that you're supporting sustainable practices and the preservation of traditional craftsmanship.
