Martin Luther King Jr was born on January 15, 1929 and was born in Atlanta, Georgia. Martin Luther King Jr wanted to make the world a better place because people were being treated differently just because of the color of their skin. He tried to fight for everyone to be treated equally. During the March on Washington, he made a speech called "I Have A Dream". He eventually helped create the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which was a law. Unfortunately, on April 4, 1968, Memphis, Tennessee, Martin Luther King Jr. was assassinated by an assassin while he was on the balcony of the Lorraine Motel. Martin Luther King Jr. made his famous speech "I Have A Dream" at the Lincoln Memorial in 1968. Dr. King explained that people in the U.S. did not treat people of color as whites the same. Dr. King wanted to end segregation.

Dr. King's dream was to bring people of different skin colors to come together; Dr. King said his speech on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial and a quote he said is: "one day right down in Alabama, little Black boys and Black girls will be able to join hands with little white boys and white girls as sisters and brothers. I have a dream today." Dr. King also talked about how the Negro was not free still, and a quote is: "100 years later, the Negro still is not free. One hundred years later, the life of the Negro is still sadly crippled by the manacles of segregation and the chains of discrimination."

Dr. King dreamed of a society free of discrimination, where everyone is treated the same and not treated differently because of the color of their skin. We have come a long way from the discrimination from the 1960s. Still today, some people are treated poorly or even mocked based on the color of their skin, religion, or how tall they are. However, we can keep Dr. King's dream going by treating people the same way and not making fun of them just because of the color of their skin.

My godmother inspires me to be like Dr. King. My godmother inspires me to be like Dr. King because she is always kind to me and everyone else. For example, when my parents go to a concert, they leave us with my godmother. I will always try to be kind to everyone I meet.

These are the reasons my godmother inspires me to be like Dr. King and to make the world a better place.

Dr. King's dream was for people not to judge people for their skin color.

A society free of discrimination means everyone should treat people the same and not by the color of their skin. We could work towards Dr. King's dream by helping people and giving them things they need and not helping them because of the color of their skin.

I want to live my life like Dr. King's message because there are people worldwide who are great and believe kindness can change the world.
