I believe that the Catholic Church is not teaching religion in the correct way. Here are some of the complaints that I have:

- You should not be able to buy forgiveness for your sins
- There should be no hierarchy in the service of God
- I believe that the bible is unholy and unimportant
- People should choose to worship God in their own way

NEW CHURCH: Liberanism -- Liber = Liberty

The Liberan focus is mostly God. Liberans choose to worship in their own way to honor God, show creativity in prayers, and also grab God's attention. They worship in small, humble churches. There is no hierarchy, just a single class that is the equivalent of a civilian. They use a slightly different bible, but not that much is changed. Liberans believe that more freedom with how they honor God makes them more noticed, and they do not often interact with other people.

Liberan Churches

A regular Liberan church

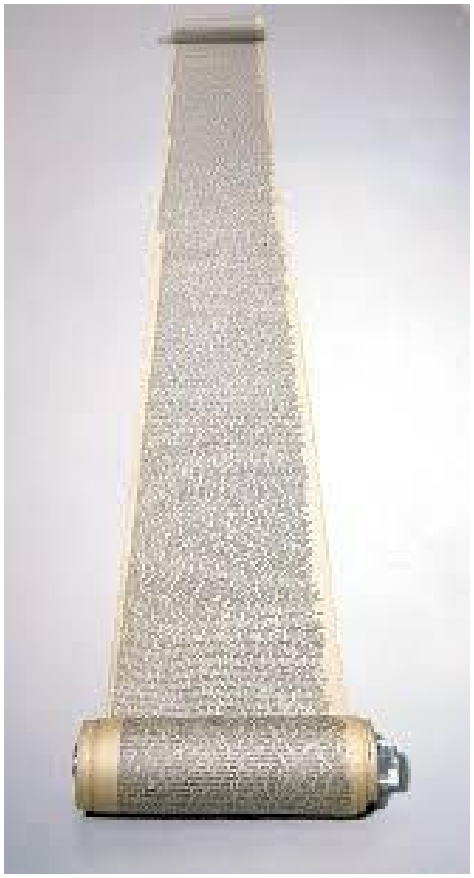

The Liberan churches are built by hand, not machine. They come in many different looks, though they always have the common steeple on top, which Liberans believe channels their prayers to God better. The churches are also laid out differently than others. Instead of a priest being in the front and directing people in benches, there are stall-like areas separated by low walls on each side of the church (3-4 on each), with windows at about chest level. It makes it so that when kneeling in prayer, you can look up through the window and to the sky to focus on God.

Common Life

Liberans usually stay away from other people, but interaction is needed when they need to go shopping for food. They often do minimal jobs for a living, such as weeding gardens and housekeeping. They live simple lives in moderate-sized houses. Children are usually homeschooled to avoid too much interaction, and they also cannot afford private schools or tutors.

Sin And Salvation

Liberans have a huge list of the sins that people might commit on a list called Libero Porta, which is latin for "The Gate of Freedom". It is usually a copy of the original and is added onto, but certain elected Liberans, called Decemuir (nonplural Custos) keep the location of the original a secret, and no one else knows where it is. When a Liberan commits a sin, they go to the church and pray for at least an hour, and pray more if they feel that they need to. Liberans do not believe in hell, but they do believe in the purgatory and heaven. They believe that everyone is sent to the purgatory, and if you do not pass, then you stay in the purgatory as an eternal judge for others.
