

Hello, Caree Brown.

My sister has been fighting with depression for a very long time. Just the other day she was about to commit suicide. Had I not been there it would have been another story.

Desperation led me online to look for local therapists that could help her. That is when I stumbled upon your website.

I like what you have done. The credentials, the reviews and the blogs are surely the right mechanism to employ in order to compel a prospect patient to your services.

Having an arsenal of human psychology at my disposal, I can also suggest a very simple, easy, new and fast way for you to generate more traffic to your website.

You can give free ebooks and newsletters in exchange for their email. This will increase your conversion rates as you will be giving free valuable info to the patients making them want your paid services. I will make sure those who doesn't directly subscribe will later do so.

If you would like to increase your traffick, resulting to more hours or even weekend sessions. Reply to this email so we can arrange a call and see how we can make this a reality.
