

Sensory Advisory

There are loud sound effects and a strobe effect in the second half of Act 1. If you have sensory sensitivities, you may want to excuse yourself when the door comes on stage in Scene 5, and you can re-enter after Intermission.

SMAC runs 2 hours including a 10 minute intermission.

DIRECTOR'S NOTE

1 year and 5 days ago, shortly after closing Spike Tape's first ever show Inheritance, I was bored and made a brainstorm Google Doc where I jotted down "Satirical Wesleyan Musical: –Student written –Jokes about Wes culture –Hero's journey, slightly cheesy but funny." What those 3 vague bullet points blossomed into has been an experience beyond my highest possible expectations. Holy shit the talent at this school is insane. I feel the utmost gratitude for the writers who reached out to me this summer and poured so much time and energy into this script, for Sophia who held this whole project together as my Stage Manager/co-Director, for the designers who believed in this idea and brought our version of Wesleyan to life, for the actors who embraced the craziness and took everything to the next level, and for all the people behind the scenes from our team, from Spike Tape, and from the greater Wesleyan community who made this insane endeavor possible.

We go to a very special school. In some ways it is wonderful, in other ways less than ideal, but I truly believe that the experience we're getting here is like none other, for better or for worse. This show revels in the absurdity that is Wesleyan. Is it profound satirical commentary criticizing our institution's flaws? Uhhhh...if that's your takeaway, sure. Is it a reflection of a dozen people's observations on weird things that have happened here? Of course. Does it also go a step further into some random ideas our writers had that have nothing to do with our school's history? Absolutely. This is not a project meant to take itself seriously, and it has been such a pleasure to work with such a spirited group of people who just want to have fun making a silly musical together.

To everyone in the cast, crew, and writing team—congrats, you made a musical! You did it. Revel in it. Have fun sharing it with the Wes community. And to everyone experiencing SMAC for the first time—welcome to this madness we’ve created, enjoy!

-Henry
