

Like an Antipodean nod to artists such as Underworld, Orbital and Chemical Brothers, the track balances heavy hitting rave production with a fist pumping vocal chant that serves as an elegiac ode to the power that memory can hold. ANTONMOND reels off evocative childhood memories (ala "The sound of thumping basketballs" because, Vinci points out with a laugh, "1996 was the year Kobe was drafted".) '1996's propulsive delivery is a happy throwback to 90s rave culture, with a nurturing spin that makes the track entirely Juno Mamba's own.

'1996' follows previous single 'Siargao Dreams', which was featured as BBC Radio 1's 'Chillest Record' before being added to rotation at Double J. Since the release of his debut EP Light Echoes, Juno Mamba has seen regular spins from Sian Eleri, Phill Taggart and Annie Mac's BBC Radio 1 shows, KCRW, Reprezent Radio, triple j, FBi and Triple R, plus praise from Complex UK, The Ransom Note, ADSR Collective, Our Culture Mag, Stereofox and KALTBLUT. The success of Light Echoes saw Juno play 2 x sold-out shows in Sydney and Melbourne.

Packed to the brim with nostalgia and emotion, '1996 (feat. ANTONMOND)' is an ode to 'childhood dreaming' and the cultural moments we hold on tight to during times of displacement.
