Description of Course:

Students will read, comprehend, and analyze both fiction and nonfiction stories, articles, and essays. There is a strong writing component in ELA classes. Students will receive direct instruction in the fundamentals of language including parts of speech, sentence and paragraph structure, capitalization, punctuation, usage, spelling, and vocabulary. Students will write three types of essays: informative, narrative, and persuasive. They will use the writing process to produce essays of at least 5 paragraphs.

They will also use the TAGSS graphic organizer to complete text-dependent analysis essays. (Turn the prompt around, Answer the prompt, Give examples, Support examples with evidence, Summarize and conclude)

Co-Taught Classes:

Co-taught classes have two teachers in the same class. They are designed for students who are 2-3 years below grade level in the ELA content area.

Students must meet the following categories:

- PSSA scores must be basic or below basic range;
- PVAAS projection is less than proficient.
