

I live by the quote,

“In order to do things right, you first need love, then technique.”(Antoni Gaudi).

When you are able to present your art with utmost emotional presence, the chapters of your story will come across. I am an avid musical storyteller that is rooted in emotional openness. I am honored to take my entire audience on an authentic, heartfelt musical journey whenever they are with me. It is my duty as an artist to provide people the space to feel, process, and leap into new emotional journeys alongside my own. Whether these journeys take place within my storytelling of modern wordless music, my own original compositions, or complete, new re-imaginings of songs once sung before; the job I provide as an artist will leave audiences emotionally fulfilled after the stories that we've shared alongside another. When the music has stopped, my audience leaves with an offering of love and purpose; inspired to share their own stories within their communities.