

Vera Donna, a Princess of a kingdom, was not a simple kingdom, it was a kingdom in heaven where the town and castle floated on a large island in the clouds, there Vera Donna was royalty, a family in itself, its parents did not impose many things on her, they did not want to overwhelm the girl with royal things, even sometimes they prepared her for the future

Even Vera Donna never really liked this royalty thing, being a princess and constantly smiling and looking pretty in front of the public, she wasn't interested in love either, although yes, it was important to have someone by her side to protect her and that the kingdom prosper in the future, I did not really feel anything before other princes or knights

She even did something that if she was secretly interested in was going on adventures and fighting with the bad guys, facing despicable monsters and being a hero, but of course, it was something frowned upon in her kingdom, since men were in charge of heavy work while women took care of delicate things

even one day ago Vera Donna was in the royal garden, looking at the flowers, in her thoughts of her boring real life, she still had an idea, her parents are currently busy so they won't be able to observe her or go with her for a while , and normally in this area the gentlemen do not watch her, so she decided to do something that would change her life

he sneaked out of the royal garden from the walls, where they lead to the town, unfortunately by not calculating well he fell ill, and therefore falling from the islands to the land below, he remained unconscious, perhaps because of the fright, because of the fall, but not really, she felt like she was floating

when he opened his eyes, everything was blurry at first, but then he could see the sky, it was strange, since he always lived in the sky, he could never see this perspective, and little by little he got up, luckily he had fallen into a lake, which martigo her fall by the water, she came out of the water little by little, but unfortunately her pretty suit was ruined by the fall and water, so she had to take off some clothes and accommodate them a little, what was left intact

He did when he got ready and got comfortable from the fall, he began to move around the place looking at his surroundings, he was in a jungle, it was not something normal in his kingdom, and the closest thing was his garden of the royal castle, but here he did not know where really go, even though he was afraid, that fear was slowly changing into emotion, that curiosity, new smells, and the feeling of freedom dominated him

Little by little, she began to walk faster to the point of running, she felt free and no longer heavy, she admired her surroundings, the animals, the plants, the fresh air, and the silence without any noise from the town or people, she felt relieved at herself, she did hard walking and feeling good for a while, being in a big field of beautiful flowers

Even so, her happiness would not last long, she began to hear something, strange noises, and when she looked she was suddenly pushed into the flowers, they were monsters, not so big, they were still armed with axes and swords, Vera Danna was clearly somewhat scared by what Suddenly things changed, and now she was constantly dodging his attacks as best she could trying to escape.

She still could not do much, several attacks hurt her beautiful skin and hair, but in one of this she was able to defend herself by stopping one's sword and in forcing forcing both of them to drop the sword, staying far away, the girl only instinctively took the sword quickly and began to use it against the monsters

At first he did not know how to handle it, he only saw the knights do it, but this was his first time and he did it clumsily, sometimes falling due to the brute attacks of the monsters, but little by little he was learning and handling the sword a little better, he was able to give him some blows to the monsters and a certain point because of how damaged they were they began to retreat

Vera Donna sighed tiredly, at first she only felt relieved, but little by little she realized, she fought, used a sword and taught those thugs a lesson, she couldn't believe it, there, at that moment seeing the sword, he knew that this day was the beginning of a new life, and an adventure