Getting Published

The following are just a few of the online sites that publish writing by students and young peo- ple. These sites are also good sources to see what others are writing about.

Skippingstones.org — An international, multicultural magazine featuring work from diverse cul- tural and socioeconomic backgrounds, Skipping Stones accepts essays, stories, poetry, letters to the editors, and other creative writing.

Kidpub.com — Membership-based site (with a one-time fee) that accepts poems, stories, plays, books reviews, etc.

Stonesoup.com — Welcomes submissions from writers and artists up to age 13. Teenink.com — Accepts fiction, nonfiction, poetry, etc. from ages 13-19.

Teenink.com — Accepts fiction, nonfiction, poetry, etc. from ages 13-19.

Tellingroom.org/get-published — Offers multiple options for publication, including writing con- tests, as well as a good collection of resources for young authors.

Kidspiritonline.com — KidSpirit accepts submissions of poetry, artwork, and nonfiction articles related to a quarterly publication theme.

Onestory.com — Accepts short stories of any genre about the teen experience—literary, fantasy, sci-fi, love stories, horror, etc.
