

What do You do if your House is a Zoo?

by John Kelly and Steph Laberis

Multi-Level LES for Special Needs Classes

Teacher's Guide

Note

This LES was written for groups of special needs students where students following the regular cycle 1-2-3 curriculum are in the same groups as students with modified tasks. In those groups, students of all ages might be mixed together. Having that in mind, all tasks are made to be presented parallelly to the students of a group. Students following the regular curriculum should be given the activities planned for that cycle. Other students could be offered tasks from various booklets to accommodate their strengths and weaknesses.

Having Pets

Teacher starts a discussion on pets by brainstorming a list of animals that can be pets. This list can be presented on the board as a reference for the discussion. Then teacher presents the questions and functional language on page 1 of the student booklet. Then, teacher reads pages 1 to 4 of the book.

My Address

Teacher presents a list of abbreviation useful when it comes to addresses. Students then have to write their own address. Teacher reads page 3 and present Oscar's address as an example (the postal code is missing). They then discuss and ask their classmates about their own living places.

Quality Pets

Using the Strategy Note on page 1, teacher presents the strategy “Inferencing”. He/She explains that the information we are looking for is not textually present in the text. It’s like gathering clues to solve a riddle. Then students complete activity 3 on page 3 of their student booklet. Teacher reads pages 5 and 6 (3 first letters from pets) to students.

Students circle one image that best represents the animal. It’s an element that is NOT in words in the text.	Students choose a quality from a wordbank to give to each animal. Students could be presented with the functional language: “What does ... mean?” in order to speed up the process and help them get to the inferencing part. They are using a “human” resource. They then write the chosen adjective on page 2 of their student booklet.	Students have to explain which clues they used to make an informed guess.

Each animal has only one characteristic in the table. Text should be read to students.	The number of animals is indicated for each characteristic. Students might require the help of a peer or an adult for some parts of the reading.	Students must find all animals without a cue of the number for each characteristic. Each animal can be used multiple times.

Teacher presents the task to the students. They will have to write an letter to one of the candidates to accept it as their pet. They write their story as if they were Oscar himself. Students have a model on page 5 of their student booklet. They write their draft / final copy on page 6. Evaluation rubric could be presented to help student know what they are expected to do. Teacher emphasises the fact that students should use passages of the texts on pages 5-6 and 9-10 of the book.

Agenda

Teacher reads the entire book to the students. Then, he/she presents the task. Students must place in order the events of the story using numbers. Teacher reads the book as many times as necessary for students to finish the task (up to 4 times seems reasonable). Teacher could also use a video version of the book.
