Dead or Alive?

On the evening of 12th October, 2011, a man walked into a London police station claiming he was suffering from amnesia. His name was Max Mercer. He had gone missing five and a half years earlier, and he was officially declared dead one year later. Now he had returned from the grave, saying he had no idea what had happened since he disappeared. But within days, the truth began to come out.

These were the known facts: Max Mercer was a former medical technician married to Ina, a retired paramedic. He had gone bike riding on 29th April, 2006. The next day, his wrecked bicycle was found in the sea at the bottom of a cliff. A rescue operation began, but Max was never found.

No one knew that Ina was faking her mourning and that Max was living in a secret room hidden in their house. So, what had in fact happened during Max Mercer’s missing years?

A few hours after Max had pushed his bike off the cliff, Ina picked him up and drove him away. And then he went into hiding in the secret room. Meanwhile, Ina collected over £250,000 (about 270.000.000 pesos) in life insurance payments. The Mercers did this because they had heavy debts that they couldn’t pay.

However, Max began feeling anxious locked up, and he wished to visit his children, who also believed that he was dead. And so, the Mercers came up with the idea of faking his amnesia. It didn’t work. Max and Ina Mercer were convicted of fraud and sentenced to over six years in prison.

Huge Blaze Destroys Recycling Plant

A Chinese lantern is thought to have started an enormous blaze at a recycling plant near Birmingham. Although the fire, which involved over 100,000 tons of plastic recycling material, is now under control, poisonous fumes and smoke are still billowing from the wreckage.

The fire began at about 11pm last night, and even though more than 200 firefighters and 45 fire engines were on the scene within minutes, it took only eight minutes for it to spread. The fire crew described the blaze as one of the biggest they had ever seen, and estimate it will be another three days before it is out completely. Three firefighters remain in the hospital with minor injuries, including heat exhaustion, problems with their eyes, and minor burns.

The advice to local residents is to keep all windows and doors shut. However, in a statement from the Health Department, a spokesperson said that anyone with asthma or an existing respiratory condition should make sure they carry their medication with them at all times and use it when necessary.

The director of the recycling plant described the fire as a tragic accident which no one had any control over. Fire chiefs and senior fire officers are urging the government to review their policy on Chinese lanterns.
