ABSTRACT

The first part of your abstract should state the problem you set out to solve or the issue you set out to explore and explain your rationale for pursuing the project. The problem or issue might be a research question, a gap in critical attention to a text, a societal concern, etc. The purpose of your study is to solve this problem and/or add to your discipline's understanding of the issue. This section of the abstract should explain how you went about solving the problem or exploring the issue you identified. Next, your abstract should list the results or outcomes of the work you have done so far. If your project is not yet complete, you may still include preliminary results or your hypotheses about what those results will be. Finally, your abstract should close with a statement of the project's implications and contributions to its field. It should convince readers that the project is interesting, valuable, and worth investigating further.
