

Hi! Thank you for applying to be our intern. Here's all the info you should probably know when filling this out:

- We ask at least 20 hrs a week of our interns. Preferably so they can be here at least part of the day, 5 days a week.
- You will need to be in New York City.
- There will be plenty of transcribing, and stuff like that, but we want you to be able to write for the blog, pitch stories, and maybe even record something. You will never have to get us lunch or coffee or any of that crap.
- WNYC internships are unpaid, save for a $12 a day travel stipend. We wish we could do something about that, but it's not our decision to make.

Please do not go crazy filling this thing out. All we need is a resume + this filled out application by September 5th. Death to cover letters. You can email your application this-a-way -- agoldman@wnyc.org

1. Pitch us two short posts for the blog. We want to hear not just a topic you'd want to talk about, but what you find interesting about it. (Most of our posts try to make some kind of argument, even if that argument is just "here's why this thing is good and worth paying attention to.")

2. Pitch us an episode or two that you'd like to hear on the podcast.

3. Please send a link to some writing you've done online. This can be your Twitter account, or a comment you left on an article. We don't need an impressive byline here, we just want to hear how you write when you're just writing.

4. Please tell us about the most memorable thing you saw on the internet this month. (This could be anything - an Onion article, a tweet that made you laugh, a weird email you got from your Mom, a picture that reminded you you're due for a vacation)
