

	Access your school Clever account to login to iReady. Consider doing lessons in 30 minute increments.
	Khan Academy hosts instructional videos across all content areas, including humanities. The Academy includes supplementary practice materials, as well.
	Use this site to watch short videos on Language Arts topics and then access response questions that you can easily print.
	The New York Times hosts a learning site that contains numerous student activities to encourage both reading and critical thinking. “Teenagers in the News” is a dynamic collection of news stories that highlight youth issues.
	Did you know that you cannot only check out books at the Multnomah County Library, but you can learn a language, stream music, and get homework help?

NewsELA hosts leveled articles on all current news events and content topics. They update articles daily, and support materials are available. This is a great resource if you need to do some research.

Scholastic Learn at Home offers high interest articles on diverse topics. The articles can be tiered to reading levels and they offer text-to-speech supports. Use these articles to engage in research, journaling, or essay development.

Looking for grade specific learning materials? The Snow Day Scholars has work focused on 6th, 7th, and 8th grades. The exercises are low tech; they can be printed and students can write directly on them.

Interested in reading leveled articles in Spanish? Check out Teen Tribune to access high interest articles on current events. Add a comment!