Four Questions Senator Husted Must Answer

Columbus, Ohio- Before he was a U.S. Senator, Jon Husted was better known to statehouse lobbyists as FirstEnergy's "Golden Boy." Despite countless attempts to deny his involvement, it's clear that Husted is deeply implicated in a major statehouse bribery scandal that Ohioans are still paying for. Before he asks for their vote again, Ohioans deserve answers to their questions

Here are questions Senator Husted must answer about his involvement in Ohio's largest pay-to-play scandal in state history:

- 1) Why did you say you had no role in the legislative process for HB6 when texts from FirstEnergy executives revealed that was not the case?
- 2) What was the exact role you played while "fighting to the end" to pass HB6?
- 3) Why are you refusing to say if you knew about FirstEnergy's $1 million contribution to a dark money group supporting your campaign?
- 4) Why were you deposed by investors suing FirstEnergy in a civil case in connection with the HB6 scandal? What were the results of that deposition?
