

Annotated Bibliography

Jones, Roxanne. "Missing Black and Latina Children Are America's Problem." CNN. Cable News Network, 02 Apr. 2017. Web. 19 Apr. 2017.

In this article, it talks about how young black and latina girls are missing and how there is not a lot of searching for them. 35% of missing children are black and another 20% are latino. The commander of Washington Metropolitan Police started a twitter hashtag, #MissingDCgirls to raise awareness of this crisis. This hashtag certainly served its purpose Twitter has seen this and is furious that there is not a lot being done

This connects to my project because it gives general information about the missing girls crisis. Also it provides how people became aware of the situation. Also it talks about steps DC is taking to resolve the crisis.

Davis, Aaron C., and Peter Hermann. "No, There Is No Spike in Missing Girls in D.C.; How Tweets Created a Crisis." The Washington Post. WP Company, 02 Apr. 2017. Web. 27 Apr. 2017.

In this article it talks about how the dc crisis isn't a crisis and it was taken the wrong way and it was just supposed to get the word around that girls are missing and there is not a lot of searching going on to find them but not that is a major amount of girls missing.

This article provides very important information for my research because it brought me to realize that my crisis wasn't actually a crisis. If I had not read this article my whole research project would be on something that isn't a current event.

Stolberg, Sheryl Gay. "Missing Girls in Washington DC Widen City's Racial Divide." The New York Times. The New York Times, 31 Mar. 2017. Web. 15 May 2017.

In this article it talks about how it's no spark in missing girls and that the police district finds 99% of missing kids. Also it says that most missing kids cases are runaways so that the problem they really need to solve along with missing kids is why kids are running away from their homes.

This furthered my research because it informed me that the crisis wasn't really a crisis. Coming across this article it made my project accurate. Also it helped me transition my research to minors running away.

"After Viral Story on D.C. Girls, Understanding the Real Perils for Missing Children of Color." PBS. Public Broadcasting Service, n.d. Web. 04 June 2017.

This article is about how the DC crisis wasn't a real crisis. Basically this article is explaining how the media misunderstood the problem. The problem was that kids were missing.

This article further my research because this changed my whole research. This article helped make my project more accurate. If I hadn't read this piece my project would be false.

Mack, Cianni Q., Ms. "Runaway Minors." Google. Google, n.d. Web. 08 June 2017.

This is a survey I put out to get my original research. It consisted of a few questions. The questions were about how people felt and what they knew about minors running away. It was put out for about seven days.

This helped further my research because it allowed me to see what teenagers knew about running away. If I didn't create this survey I wouldn't know how this issue affected the people in my community. This was a very important part of my project.

"Home - National Runaway Safeline | National Runaway Safeline." Https://www.1800runaway.org/. N.p., n.d. Web. 09 June 2017.

This website is a hotline for minors thinking about running away. It give information and a 24-hour number that people can call. It has places you can volunteer and donate.

In my project it was very helpful because it was one of the solutions I talked about in my project. I included this organization's number on my posters around my school. This website will help minors who need to talk

"YouthLine • A Teen Crisis Helpline with Teen to Teen Support." YouthLine. N.p., n.d. Web. 12 June 2017.

This is another organization that allows minors to get support when they need it. This organization allows minors to call , text or email to reach out when they need help. Youthline is similar to National Runaway Safeline.

Youthline helped my project because it is a reliable resource to add to the takeaways of my project. I also used the number to Youthline to put on my posters for my agent of change. By putting the Youthline number on my posters minors will have a helpful outlet when they need help.

Finzel, Rochelle. "Homeless and Runaway Youth." National Conference of State Legislators. N.p., 14 Apr. 2016. Web. 12 June 2017

This is an article about how minors runaway and that results in homeless or worse results. In this article it gives statistics about youth running away. This is a reliable resource that I used.

From this I used some facts that were used in my research and survey that I put out. Having this article helped further my understanding and ability to spread the facts to other people. Using this made my work and research more trustworthy.