

Subject Line: Great ideas come when one struggles

Hello, Priscilla

How are you?

It seems that the world is against you with the unfortunate events of the weakness of the ISM, the rise of mortgages, and increased inflation.

Even though you are in a difficult situation you are still able to make good business moves, almost unbothered. (Tell me...What is your secret?)

For example, the launch of surveys to check out the usage of energy makes multi-family homes safer.

This is the right step for the future of the environment you clearly have a vision for a healthier earth and because of your considerate heart, you guys at Fannie Mae are one of the first ones to do it.

I had a proposition to put you in a position where you won't even have to lift a finger and Fannie Mae will be ahead of the competition to the point where they will build envy.

With your business structure, it's incredibly easy to implement. You guys easily generate traffic it's just reeling them in.

Only a handful of business models have implemented this and it works.

The results are at the point of the great scale of customers, and I saw how many have already agreed to buy but have closed the deal.

Fixed! With barely any work on your end.

If you like it let me know, not even high mortgage rates can stop me from selling paired with your great quality business and opportunities to sustain homeownership!

Thanks,

Zuniga
